Three charged in deadly Indy explosion

Henderson native, wife killed

By Rick Callahan
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS – Three people charged in a gas explosion that devastated an Indianapolis neighborhood deliberately set up the deadly blast to collect a big insurance payout, authorities said Friday.

The home's owner, Monserrate Shirley; her boyfriend, Mark Leonard; and his brother, Bob Leonard, were arrested Friday and charged with murder, arson and other counts in the Nov. 10 blast that killed two people.

Shirley, 47, was facing mounting financial woes, including $63,000 in credit card debt and worsening bankruptcy proceedings, court documents say. And a friend of Mark Leonard's told investigators Leonard said he had "lost a ton of money" — about $10,000 — at a casino some three weeks before the explosion.

Investigators believe the trio had actually tried but failed to blow up Shirley's home the weekend before the successful timed explosion, according to Marion County Prosecutor Terry Curry. The fiery blast destroyed five homes, including Shirley's, and caused widespread damage to dozens of others in the Richmond Hill subdivision in the far south side of the city.

Curry called the explosion a "thoroughly senseless act" that killed Shirley's next-door neighbors. He said the victims, John Dion Longworth, a 34-year-old electronics expert, and his 36-year-old wife, second-grade teacher Jennifer Longworth, were "in the prime of their lives."

Dion Longworth is formerly of Henderson. He graduated in 1996 from Henderson County High School, where he was elected vice president of his senior class.

Randall Cable, the attorney for Shirley and Mark Leonard, said he was stunned by their arrest.

President, Speaker agree cliff can still be avoided

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON – With Congress in gridlock and stocks taking a fall, President Barack Obama issued a stern summons to lawmakers Friday to pass legislation to prevent year-end fiscal cliff tax increases on millions and avoid an imminent expiration of benefits for the long-term unemployed.

Republican House Speaker John Boehner said Obama himself must give more ground to reach an agreement. He added, "How we get there, God only knows."

Congress was shutting down, and Obama was headed to Hawaii to join his family for the holidays. But both men indicated they'd be back working to beat the fast-approaching Jan. 1 deadline with an agreement between Christmas and New Year's.

One day after House anti-tax rebels torpedoed Boehner's 'Plan B' legislation because it would raise rates on million-dollar-earners, Obama said he still wants a bill that requires the well-to-do to pay more. "Everybody's got to give a little bit in a sensible way" to prevent the economy from pitching over a recession-threatening fiscal cliff, he said.

He spoke after talking by phone with Boehner — architect of the failed House bill — and meeting with Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid.

Boehner's office quickly issued a statement saying the Ohio Republican intends to return to the Capitol after Christmas "ready to find a solution that can pass both houses of Congress." At the same time, spokesman Brendan Buck

NRA: Put police in every school

'Only thing that stops a bad guy with a gun is a good guy with a gun'

By Philip Elliott and Nedra Pickler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON – Guns and police officers in all American schools are what's needed to stop the next killer "waiting in the wings," the National Rifle Association declared Friday, taking a no-retreat stance in the face of growing calls for gun control after the Connecticut shootings that claimed the lives of 26 children and school staff.

"The only thing that stops a bad guy with a gun is a good guy with a gun," said Wayne LaPierre, the group's chief executive officer.

Some members of Congress who had long scoffed at gun-control proposals have begun to suggest some concessions could be made, and a fierce debate over legislation seems likely next month. President Barack Obama has demanded "real action, right now."

The nation's largest gun-rights lobby broke its weeklong silence on the shooting rampage at Sandy Hook Elementary School with a defiant presentation. The event was billed as a news conference, but NRA leaders took no questions. Twice, they were interrupted by banner-waving protesters, who were removed by security.

Some had predicted that after the slaughter of a score of elementary-school children by a man using a semi-automatic rifle, the group might soften its stance, at least slightly. Instead, LaPierre delivered a 25-minute tirade against the notion that another gun law would stop killings in a culture where children are exposed daily to violence in video games, movies and music videos. He argued that guns are the solution, not the problem.

"Before Congress reconvenes, before we engage in any lengthy debate over legislation, regulation or anything else; as soon as our kids return to school after the holiday break, we need to have every single school in America immediately deploy a protection program proven to work," LaPierre said. "And by that I mean armed security."

He said Congress should immediately appropriate funds to post an

Obama wants Kerry for secretary of state

By Julie Pace
Associated Press

WASHINGTON – President Barack Obama on Friday nominated Massachusetts Sen. John Kerry, one of Washington's most respected voices on foreign policy, as his next secretary of state.

The move is the first in an expected overhaul of Obama's national security team heading into his second term.

As the nation's top diplomat, Kerry will not only be tasked with executing the president's foreign policy objectives, but will also have a hand in shaping them. The longtime lawmaker has been in lockstep with Obama on issues like nuclear non-proliferation, but ahead of the White House in advocating aggressive policies in Libya, Egypt and elsewhere that the president later embraced.

John Kerry

"He is not going to need a lot of on-the-job training," Obama said, standing alongside Kerry in a Roosevelt Room ceremony. "Few individuals know as many presidents and prime ministers or grasp our foreign policies as firmly as John Kerry."

He is expected to win confirmation easily in the Senate, where he has served since 1985, the last six years as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Kerry would take the helm at the State Department from Secretary Hillary Rodham Clinton, who has long planned to leave the administration early next year. Clinton is recovering from a concussion sustained in a fall and

Gunman kills three in Pennsylvania town

■ Two more die before troopers take shooter's life in gunfight

The Associated Press

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Pa. – A man fatally shot a woman decorating for a children's Christmas party at a tiny church hall and killed two men elsewhere in a rural township on Friday before he was shot dead in a gunfight with state troopers.

Three troopers in patrol cars were injured in a pursuit that began after the gunman, driving a pick-up truck, fired at them, police said. One trooper injured a wrist and then was hit in the chest but was saved by a bulletproof vest.

The gunman was killed during a final exchange of gunfire after ramming his truck head-on into another police cruiser, authorities said.

The shootings began in Frankstown Township, in central Pennsylvania, at about 9 a.m., and investigators were processing five crime scenes within about a 1.5-mile radius, authorities said at a news briefing Friday afternoon.

Troopers were responding to a 911 call of a shooting in the township when they heard calls reporting at least one other shooting elsewhere, state police said.

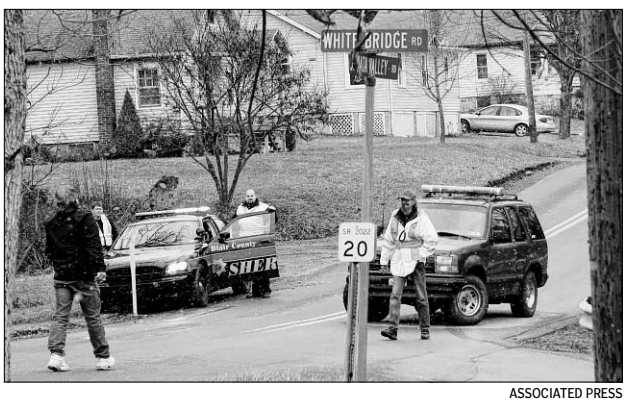

"It's going to take us some time to put this all together ... and know exactly what occurred," said Lt. Col. George Bivens, deputy state police commissioner.

Authorities did not release the names of the victims or the shooter, though they did say the man lived in Blair County.

State police said they were still trying to piece together a timeline and motive.

The gunman and the victims weren't related, though the victims may have been, at least distantly, Blair County District Attorney Rich Consiglio said.

Besides the woman, Bivens said, one man was shot at a residence, and the other man was shot at a crash site where the gunman "used his truck and also struck that vehicle much in the same manner that he did to our state police officer."

Governor's wife apologizes for letter in porn case

By Brooke Adams
Salt Lake Tribune

SALT LAKE CITY – Jeanette Herbert, wife of Utah Gov. Gary Herbert, apologized this week for a letter she sent to a U.S. District Court judge asking for leniency in the sentencing of a convicted child pornographer.

Herbert wrote the letter on behalf of Ryan Johnson, who pleaded guilty this spring to one count of producing child pornography. On Dec. 13, U.S. District Judge Ted Stewart sentenced Johnson to 25 years in federal prison and 10 years of supervision once released.

In a statement released Thursday, the governor's office said Jeanette Herbert was unfamiliar with its policy of abstaining from writing such letters.

Johnson, 34, admitted that between July 2009 and January 2011, he adopted the online persona of a 16-year-old girl to persuade 10 boys to send him sexually explicit photographs of themselves. In return, he sent the boys sexually explicit photographs of an unidentified female. Many of the exchanges included a promise of engaging in sex.

Johnson asked his victims to include their faces in the photographs. Over time, his conduct escalated as he asked for more explicit images. When victims balked, Johnson threatened to publicly share the images already provided. The victims were between the ages of 12 and 18.

In her letter, dated Sept. 23, Herbert said she understood lawmakers' interest in "trying to crack down" on pornography addictions with a "somewhat no tolerance approach.

"But the majority of the young people that have struggled with this problem are good kids that have gotten caught up in pornography's addictive snares," Herbert wrote, adding that "a one size fits all law and punishment is not what I see as a real solution to the problem.

"We need to make sure that the punishment fits the crime and those decisions are made on a case-by-case basis," she wrote.

Herbert closed by noting Johnson has a close, supportive family and that he "realizes that he must accept some degree of punishment for his crime" but asked the judge to "look at the merits of the case and take it all into consideration."

Herbert has served as honorary chairwoman of a philanthropic program founded by Johnson's mother, Ali Johnson.

Author, playwright Larry L. King, 83, dies

NEW YORK – Larry L. King, a writer and playwright whose magazine article about a campaign to close down a popular bordello became a hit Tony Award-nominated musical "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" and a movie starring Burt Reynolds, died Thursday. He was 83.

His wife, Barbara Blaine, said King died after battling emphysema at Chevy Chase House, a retirement home in Washington where he had been living the past six months. "One of the things that I will always remember about Larry is that he remained funny all the way through this illness," she said.

He wrote in a good ol' boy vernacular style similar to other Southern authors such as Roy Blount. King wrote two musicals, five plays, 14 books, a few screenplays and hundreds of magazine articles, for which he won an O. Henry Award in 2001.

His books include "None But a Blockhead" about the act of writing, and a children's book called "Because of Lozo Brown," about the fears children have of meeting others. Collections of his essays were also published, including "The Old Man and Lesser Mortals," which began as an article about his father.

"King's strengths are his energy and wit and his integrity not to compromise the fundamentals. He rings an American bell," Norman Mailer once said.

Philadelphia teen sues school over Mitt Romney T-shirt flap

PHILADELPHIA – The family of a Philadelphia teenager who says she was mocked by her geometry teacher for wearing a Mitt Romney T-shirt to class has sued the teacher and the school district.

The Philadelphia Inquirer reports (http://bit.ly/VV3Tka) the lawsuit claims the district ignored 16-year-old Samantha Pawlucy's right to free speech.

The lawsuit claims the district let other students harass Pawlucy and subjected her to emotional distress. It seeks unspecified damages.

A district spokesman won't comment.

Teacher Lynette Gaymon has apologized to Pawlucy. A telephone message left Friday for Gaymon hasn't been returned.

Pawlucy says the teacher questioned why she was wearing the shirt and called others to the room to laugh at her in September.

Romney called the girl's family and said he appreciated her courage. The Republican lost Pennsylvania and the November election to President Barack Obama.

State touting resource officers

The Associated Press

Kentucky education officials said Friday the National Rifle Association's call for armed police officers in every school is not the answer to school safety issues.

Instead, officials said every school should have a school resource officer who is not only armed, but is specially trained to work in schools.

"I support safety in our schools," said Terry Holliday, Kentucky's commissioner of education, "however, no armed guard could have prevented the Newtown incident. The culture of violence within our society makes movie theatres, churches, post offices, schools, and colleges prime targets for mass shootings."

Holliday said school resource officers are "part of the teaching and learning process."

Jon Akers, director of the Kentucky Center for School Safety, which helps schools develop individualized safety plans, said he would refine the NRA's statement to say that schools need resource officers, not just armed police officers.

SROs in elementary schools can establish relationships with students at a young age to develop trust, he said.

Mason County is boosting police in schools

The Associated Press

MAYSVILLE, Ky. – A sheriff in northeastern Kentucky says he plans to increase the presence of law enforcement offers at local schools beginning in January.

The Ledger Independent reports Mason County Sheriff Patrick Boggs made the announcement on the department's Facebook page.

Boggs said that deputies will be assigned on a rotating basis to spend some time daily at both private and public schools. He said after the massacre at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Conn., he sought permission from school administrators in Mason County to initiate the program. He says the initiative does more than provide an increased presence — it will "get the students familiar with officers and the officers familiar with the schools" should an emergency arise.

Mason County High School Principal Steve Appelman said school safety has taken on a new significance since the fatal shootings at Sandy Hook, and he has had discussions with the sheriff's office and the police department on how to make classrooms safer for students, parents, teachers and administrators.

"I welcome any presence (of law enforcement) that we could have," Appelman said.

Suit: Louisville lounge denied access to blacks

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE – A restaurant emblazoned with the Maker's Mark name is accused in a lawsuit of civil-rights violations by allegedly refusing to allow a party for a black group. The claim has stirred the Kentucky bourbon maker to distance itself from the downtown watering hole.

Andre Mulligan claims in his lawsuit that he was making party preparations when he met with officials from Maker's Mark Bourbon House and Lounge last Aug. 17, the day before the event. The Louisville man, accompanied by his brother, was pressed to specify the ratio of blacks to whites who would attend the event, the suit claims.

Mulligan responded that all the guests would be black, the suit claims. Lounge officials then told Mulligan that none of the blacks would be allowed to hold the event there and he would not be served if he tried to enter the lounge on that date.

The entertainment district, Fourth Street Live, flatly said it wasn't involved in the alleged incident and said the restaurant denied the allegations.

The suit filed this week in Jefferson County Circuit Court claims the lounge refused service to all blacks planning to join the party who tried to enter the establishment on the evening of Aug. 18.

Mulligan, described in the suit as a University of Louisville graduate with bachelor's degrees in political science and history, was at one point denied access to the downtown entertainment district that includes the Maker's Mark lounge.

He claims he was told by security guards to "shut up," that he was trespassing and would be "locked up" if he didn't leave. At the same time, Mulligan saw numerous whites entering the entertainment venue without incident.

Rural post office being auctioned

BOWLING GREEN – A small post office in south-central Kentucky is being put up for auction.

The Daily News reports the building where Alvaton's post office is located will be auctioned on Saturday, but that won't mean the end of postal services at the location.

Postal Service spokesman David Walton says the agency says some small post offices are being considered for closure, but the Alvaton location is not one of them.

"We have an active lease through 2017 and an option to lease for another five years," Walton said. "So we are not going anywhere."

U of L law school receives $1M gift

LOUISVILLE – The University of Louisville Louis D. Brandeis School of Law has received a $1 million gift that will permanently endow a student-run clinic that provides legal advice to the poor.

The donation from Sue Ellen Ackerson of Louisville and her family was made to honor her late husband, Robert Ackerson, who founded the Ackerson and Yann law firm. The clinic will be renamed The Robert and Sue Ellen Ackerson Law Clinic.

Since the student-run clinic began, it has handled more than 500 cases while working closely with the Legal Aid Society.

Man sues Louisville police for assault

LOUISVILLE – A man has filed a lawsuit against Metro Louisville and its police department alleging that officers violated his rights.

Rick Brent filed the lawsuit Monday in Jefferson Circuit Court and is asking for compensatory and punitive damages in relation to the incident at the Prime Lounge on Dec. 17, 2011.

Metro police spokesman Dwight Mitchell cited a city policy in declining to comment on the pending suit.

Meanwhile, officer Charles Wheeler is facing a fourth-degree assault charge in connection with the altercation. According to a criminal summons, Wheeler was off-duty when ordered Brent to move from a seat at the lounge. The summons accuses Wheeler of hitting Brent repeatedly when the man refused to move after Wheeler flashed his badge.

House fire kills Rowan County child

MOREHEAD, Ky. – A house fire in eastern Kentucky has killed a child.

WAVE-TV in Louisville reported a family of six lived in the Rowan County home where fire broke out.

A neighbor of the family said the mother and three small girls ran to her house, begging for help Thursday morning. The station reported the children had burns on their arms and a boy was missing.

The coroner confirmed a child died in the fire.

Five members of the family were taken to St. Clair Medical Regional Center in Morehead. Four were transferred to University of Kentucky Medical Center and one was taken to Shriners Hospital in Cincinnati.

The names of the victims were not immediately released.

Counterfeit bill found in printer leads to arrest

RICHMOND, Ky. – Police say a central Kentucky man was arrested after allegedly returning a printer to Walmart that contained a counterfeit bill.

The Richmond Register cited a statement from police in reporting that 19-year-old Dennarius J. Barnett was charged on Thursday with criminal possession of a forged instrument.

Police said that Barnett allegedly returned the printer last month to the retailer and a store employee found a $20 counterfeit bill in it. When Barnett returned to the store on Thursday, police say employees called officers who interviewed Barnett before arresting him.

Police say he was taken to the Madison County Detention Center.

Human trafficking focus of event

LOUISVILLE – The topic of human trafficking will be the focus of a conference next month at the University of Louisville.

Among the speakers at the Jan. 16 event are Theresa Flores, a child sex trafficking survivor, and Colleen Clines, director of the Anchal Project, a nonprofit group that assists women in India.

The program, titled "Modern Day Slavery: Breaking the Chains," lasts from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. EST at the Red Barn on Belknap Campus.

Tickets are $15 for the general public and $7.50 for U of L students and are available at http://uoflhtc.eventbrite.com .

Town's future should keep commission busy

Congratulations to the newly elected city commissioners and mayor. You have been entrusted with the governance of our city for the near future. I would encourage each of you to look outside the box for new and innovated ways to make Henderson grow and become a better place to live.

The geographic location of Henderson is 600 miles from about 65 percent of the commerce in the U.S. With highways in all directions it makes us the ideal location for growth. Take a look around at other cities nearby and ask what they are doing that we are not. Think bigger and better, but think.

I realize you have to operate in a fish bowl, however petty bickering among yourselves serves no purpose. Leave the small details to the capable city manager and his staff. I would much rather you have our future in mind than having our backs covered.

Darrell Lovell, Henderson

Kicking God out opens door for evil

America, those Ten Commandments sure pose a threat to your children's mind don't they? Those Ten Commandments just might make your children's minds a little bit too restricted, you think? Those commandments to include "thou shalt not kill" are just too inappropriate to have posted in your schools, much less taught and thus reinforced in the minds of your youth, right?

Who are the nuts that removed the Ten Commandments from your schools? Where are these nuts? They are the same ones who run around, spewing about controlling guns as the solution. The shooter is in a different class than nuts. Rather than have witnessed a nut, a cold-blooded murdering devil is what we all have witnessed. It is what it is.

I am not suggesting the posting of the commandments would have thwarted this vicious act. But, on earth, where God exits, the devil enters. Say you wanted to take God's BASIC COMMANDMENTS out of your schools? Do you like children's blood better? America, do you think you are big enough to run God out, to kick the Lord God of Israel out? Are you sure you want to do this? What else did you say that old Bible said? Was it God shall not be mocked?

The body dieth, the spirit is eternal. I hear those children's voices in heaven pleading to all parents to start praying for their children now to be delivered from the evil that is coming for kicking God out. Their sacrificial death is not in vain, if we start and never cease, now.

Hal Branson, Henderson County

Christmas is about giving of ourselves

The Apostle Paul in the Bible says that when he was a child all of his ways were (naturally) like a child. But when he became a man he put away childish things, and thinking.

When we were children Christmas meant getting gifts, but when we have become adults Christmas ought to be about giving gifts. Someone has well said, "Getting is making a living, giving is making a life."

At Christmas ("Christ" plus "mas" — a celebration of Christ's birthday, whenever that actually was) we celebrate God's gift of himself in Jesus Christ. How appropriate it is to give ourselves, and of ourselves, to God and others at Christmas and all year long.

As to giving, one wonders if merchants have promoted the idea of giving stuff or if the demands of people have encouraged merchants to provide stuff.

Also as to giving, it's always good to give to charitable needs in someone's honor rather than giving some unwanted gift. As a wife said to her husband, "Your Christmas gift is exactly what I needed, to exchange for what I really want."

Steve Raleigh, Henderson

Tasers may have helped at Sandy Hook

In the days of the old West, there were few mass killings because the populace was armed and able to fight back. The killer might have gotten a few victims, but someone would get him sooner or later.

I'm certainly not advocating that we all become gunslingers, but it seems to me that there is a partial solution to the problem: Train and arm responsible people with Tasers.

If that principal in Connecticut had had one, she could very possibly have saved many young lives, and even her own.

James L. Hartley, Henderson

Is now good time to talk about gun rights?

It was just a matter of time.

For years now, those who support gun rights have managed to shut down the conversation on gun control. Those on the extreme right have said, time and time again, after each gun massacre, that it wasn't the "right" time to discuss the issue. It was too soon, too political, too whatever. Gun control advocates should just shut up until the dust settled, or better yet just shut up, period.

It was just a matter of time before something this bad happened.

The gun lobby has succeeded in shutting down the conversation on gun violence. For years, no new legislation has been offered, even in the face of rising gun crimes. There has been no action from the White House on guns, not even when Rep. Gabrielle Giffords was shot in the head. Regulations on assault weapons were allowed to expire without so much as a whimper, much less a fight.

Over and over again, a mentally unstable individual with easy access to weapons has inflicted violence on our people, and over and over again the gun lobby has silenced the debate.

Twenty children were killed by a madman with a gun.

So, is NOW a good time to talk?

S.W. Reynolds, Henderson

State's squandering behind budget deficit

Headline: "Plan adds $700 million to Kentucky budget; seniors to bear cost." There is compassion for you, with the rest of the plan being to raise taxes on almost everything and everyone else also!

We are running a $1.6 billion deficit while Gov. Beshear and company are buying with taxpayer money General Electric energy efficient light bulbs for the GE plant, throwing millions away on riverfront developments all along the Ohio River, putting it in horse parks and other such things while our infrastructure languishes in a state that doesn't meet 1970s federal standards, and I could go on.

I often hear how limiting the size and scope of government is an action of someone who is hateful. What could be more hateful than attacking and robbing the poor and elderly? I would propose that Kentucky have as its only tax a luxury tax. In other words, just state and local sales taxes with food, shelter and prescription medications as the only exemptions. The shelter exemption would only refer to one's primary residence or farm.

Under this system last year's receipts become this year's budget. Kentucky would become prosperous, and this would oblige the government to regulate itself. The current system that has us becoming entrenched in class envy and taxing the least of us reminds me of something Thomas Jefferson said, "that the minority possess their equal rights, which equal law must protect, and to violate would be oppression."

Classifying cannabis as dangerous drug false

By Charles Waller

Second of two parts

KSP Commissioner Brewer perpetuates misconceptions and prohibitionist propaganda. Cannabis is not a dangerous drug.

Richard M. Nixon was unhappy with the Schaffer Commission report 40 years ago because the findings were factually based and did not support his "drug war." More than 10 years later the DEA's own chief administrative law judge, Francis Young, ruled against the agency in its attempt to prevent THC from being rescheduled based on scientific facts. Two points Judge Young included in his ruling were:

■ In strict medical terms marijuana is far safer than many foods we commonly consume. For example, eating ten raw potatoes can result in a toxic response. By comparison, it is physically impossible to eat enough marijuana to induce death.

■ Marijuana, in its natural form, is one of the safest therapeutically active substances known to man. By any measure of rational analysis marijuana can be safely used within a supervised routine of medical care.

Research over the past 30 plus years has yielded informative results. Check the results of a 30-year pulmonary study by Dr. Donald Tashkin of UCLA, intended to prove "marijuana" was more of a cancer-causing agent than tobacco. The results of the study showed a lower incidence rate of lung cancer among cannabis-only smokers than even non-smokers.

Cannabis has been used by humans for thousands of years — for food, fiber, fuel, medicine and recreation. There has never been one death attributed solely to cannabis consumption. The medicinal properties of cannabis were widely recognized in the 19 century and widely used into the middle of the 20th century.

A recent insurance industry statistical analysis showed cannabis users to be safer drivers than non-users. This is apparently due to a combination of factors. Heightened awareness of skills and lack of desire to drive in the first place are believed to be major factors contributing to the results. Unlike people who drink alcohol and believe they are unimpaired, the average cannabis user has little desire to drive under the influence.

I challenge every reader to research the facts. The information is readily available. You don't have to rely on politically motivated propaganda.

Scientific evidence directly refutes the misinformation being perpetuated by law enforcement agencies concerned about losing federal funding.

If cannabis can help one pediatric oncology patient or prevent one veteran from committing suicide due to PTSD, who can offer a factually based argument for retaining cannabis on the Schedule 1 list of controlled substances?

The classification of cannabis as a "drug" with no medicinal properties and a high risk for abuse and addiction is false.

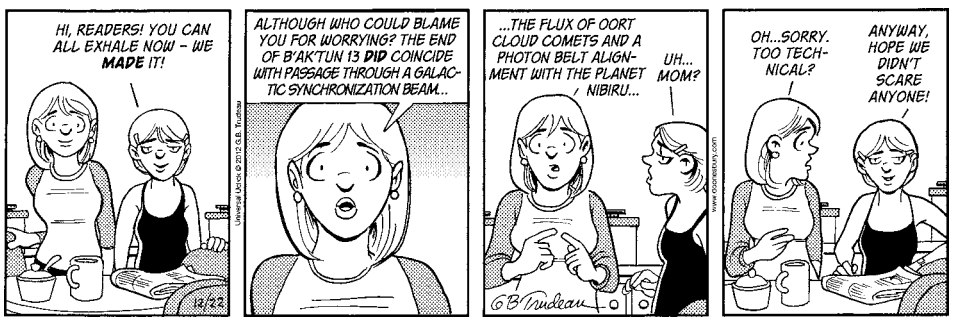

Print the facts instead of perpetuating profit-protecting propaganda. Journalism has an obligation to the people to educate and inform, not to pad the pockets of the plutocrats.

This country still belongs to "We, the people ...," not corporate "people."

Other states and localities are acting on fact, not fiction. Is Kentucky unable to do the same?

Snowstorm in Midwest weakens, moves east

By Jeff Karoub
Associated Press

DETROIT – The first widespread snowstorm of the season weakened as it moved east Friday, but not before it dumped more than 1½ feet of snow in Michigan and made travel difficult in the Great Lakes region.

A semitrailer went out of control on a bridge slick with snow, barreled down an embankment and struck a concrete barrier in Indiana, killing the driver. In Michigan, a school bus carrying six children crashed into a tree that had fallen across a road in near whiteout conditions. There were no injuries in that accident.

The storm, part of a system that began in the Rockies earlier in the week, was blamed for deaths in at least five states. Snow was forecast Friday in Pennsylvania, and the system was developing a second front with a mix of snow and rain in the New York City area and New Jersey. It was expected to "spin its way northward through New England and into Canada" into the weekend, National Weather Service meteorologist Brian Adam said.

Aviation officials and travelers welcomed sunny skies in Chicago, where more than 500 flights were canceled at the two airports the day before. Only 50 flights were canceled Friday, and a similar number faced delays of up to two hours.

Utility crews worked to restore power in a half-dozen states, but thousands remained without service after heavy snow and strong winds pulled down lines. Some schools canceled classes for a second day.

Late Sen. Inouye is hailed for 'extraordinary' service

By Kevin Freking
Associated Press

WASHINGTON – With reverential words and warm memories, President Barack Obama on Friday led the admirers paying tribute to the late Sen. Daniel Inouye of Hawaii, a war hero and senator for 50 years who was hailed for his leadership and modesty. Obama said Inouye was the one who "hinted to me what might be possible in my own life."

"For him freedom and dignity were not abstractions," Obama said at the National Cathedral service. "They were values that he had bled for, ideas he sacrificed for."

Inouye died Monday of respiratory complications. He was 88. Inouye worked until mere minutes before his death, shaking hands with his friends and caressing the hands of his family in those final moments, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid told the service. Reid said the senator thanked his security detail and the doctors and nurses, and wrote notes detailing his last wishes.

The tributes from the nation's political leaders were deeply personal. Vice President Joe Biden said he remembered thinking of Inouye: "I wish I could be more like that man. He's a better man than I am."

Former President Bill Clinton described Inouye as "one of the most remarkable Americans I have ever known."

Inouye was the first Japanese-American elected to both houses of Congress and the second-longest serving senator in U.S. history. He was awarded a Medal of Honor, the nation's highest military honor, for bravery during World War II, including a heroic effort that cost him his right arm.

"They blew his arm off in World War II, but they never, never laid a finger on his heart or his mind," Clinton said.

Inouye's 50 years in the Senate included playing key roles in congressional investigations of the Watergate and Iran-Contra scandals.

One speaker after another described Inouye as a political giant with refreshing humility. Obama said that Inouye ultimately decided he had done OK in representing his state and his nation.

"Danny, you were more than OK," Obama said. "You were extraordinary."

Escapee likely going back to same jail

CHICAGO – A convicted bank robber captured days after a daring escape from a high-rise jail in downtown Chicago will likely return to the same federal lockup, though this time he'll most likely be held in a special isolation unit, his attorney said Friday.

Joseph "Jose" Banks, 37, looked tired but calm, nodding and saying "yes" when a judge asked if he understood he had been charged with escaping from a jail just two blocks from the courthouse.

U.S. Magistrate Judge Sidney Schenkier also asked Banks, who had represented himself during his bank robbery trial, if he agreed to let an attorney his family hired represent him on the escape charge. Banks paused, shrugged his shoulders and said, "OK."

Another man involved in the escape early Tuesday, Kenneth Conley, remains at large.

The FBI said Banks was arrested late Thursday, days after he and Conley somehow broke a large hole into the bottom of a 6-inch window of the Metropolitan Correctional Center, dropped a makeshift rope made of bed sheets out and climbed down about 20 stories to the ground.

Few of academies' sex assaults reported

WASHINGTON – New details in a Pentagon report show that military academy students report just a fraction of the sexual assaults they say occurred in the past school year, signaling a continued reluctance by victims to seek criminal investigations.

As reported earlier this week, the report shows that reported sexual assaults at the nation's three military academies jumped by 23 percent overall this year. But officials say that at least some of the increase is the result of ongoing efforts to encourage military members and students to report unwelcome sexual contact.

Defense Secretary Leon Panetta said in a memo released Friday that he's concerned there hasn't been greater progress in preventing sexual assault and harassment at the academies. He has asked officials to beef up prevention programs.

According to an anonymous survey of academy students, more than 50 percent of women and 10 percent of men said they experienced sexual harassment during the last school year. At the same time, a bit more than 12 percent of women and 2 percent of men enrolled in the three military academies said they experienced "unwanted sexual contact."

Day care background checks draw scrutiny

WASHINGTON – Defense Secretary Leon Panetta is giving the Defense Department and the military services until Jan. 21 to review the backgrounds of all employees who have contact with children in department programs and to report back in writing.

Panetta's memo follows revelations that at least 31 people were suspended from two Army day care centers at Fort Myer, Va., last week after officials scrutinized their backgrounds and found a range of criminal convictions.

The memo also underscores lingering questions about the Army's handling of background checks for the day care centers.

MALI

Militants agree to cease hostilities

BAMAKO – The al-Qaida-linked group that controls much of northern Mali and other rebels agreed Friday to cease hostilities in the areas it controls, a day after the United Nations backed a regional plan to oust the Islamists from power in a military intervention next year.

Ansar Dine, which controls the northern cities of Timbuktu and Kidal, and a secular rebel group known as the NMLA made the concessions following talks in neighboring Algeria.

The two groups vowed "to refrain from all actions that would cause confrontation and hostilities in the areas that they control."

They also vowed to work to free hostages in northern Mali, where al-Qaida's North Africa branch is holding seven French nationals captive.

KENYA

At least 39 killed during village raid

NAIROBI – At least 39 people were killed when farmers raided a village of herders in southeastern Kenya early Friday in renewed fighting between two communities with a history of violent animosity, a police official said.

Thirteen children, six women, 11 men and nine attackers were killed, said police official Anthony Kamitu. Forty-five houses were set on fire during the attack, Kenya Red Cross spokeswoman Nelly Muluka said.

Kamitu, who is leading police operations to prevent attacks in the region, said that the Pokomo tribe of farmers raided a village of the seminomadic Orma herding community at dawn in the Tana River delta.

SYRIA

Rebels launch raid amid Scud reports

BEIRUT – Syria's rebels stepped up attacks on strategic sites including a sprawling military complex in the country's north on Friday, while reports emerged that President Bashar Assad's forces continued to fire Scud missiles at rebel areas.

Russian President Vladimir Putin told European leaders that Russia does not seek to protect Assad but that only a negotiated solution can end the conflict.

Anti-regime activists reported rebel attacks on strategic government sites in northern Syria on Friday, showing rebel efforts to cut government supply lines, free up roads and seize arms from government bases.

In-vitro fertilization ban ousted by court

SAN JOSE — A Costa Rican ban on in-vitro fertilization has been struck down by the Inter-American Court of Human Rights in a decision that reproductive health groups said could lead to greater access to abortion and some contraception in other Latin American countries.

The court said in a ruling late Thursday that a long-standing Costa Rican guarantee of protection for every human embryo violated the reproductive freedom of infertile couples because it prohibited them from using in-vitro fertilization, which often involves the disposal of embryos not implanted in a patient's uterus.

Egyptian Islamists, foes clash ahead of referendum

By Najib Jobain and Maggie Michael
Associated Press

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt – Violence erupted between Egypt's divided camps on Friday, the eve of the final round of a referendum on a constitution that has polarized the nation, as Islamists and their opponents pelted each other with stones while police fired tear gas in the streets of the Mediterranean city of Alexandria.

The contentious referendum, which would bring a greater implementation of Islamic law to Egypt, is expected to be approved in today's voting.

The new clashes — in which opponents of Islamists set fire to cars and dozens of people were hurt — illustrated how the new charter is unlikely to ease the violent conflict over the country's future. For a month, Egypt has been torn between Islamists and their opponents, who accuse President Mohammed Morsi and his Muslim Brotherhood of trying to unilaterally impose their will on the country.

Meanwhile, Morsi already was gearing up for the next steps after the constitution's passage, making a last-minute appointment of 90 new members to the parliament's upper house, a third of its total membership. Current rules allow him to do so, but if he waited until the charter was passed he could appoint only 10.

The violence in Alexandria was a sign of how the conflict has moved beyond the issue of the constitution, to the deep resentments between the two camps.

Riot police swung batons and fired volleys of tear gas to separate stone-throwing Brotherhood members and ultraconservative Salafis on one side, and youthful secular protesters on the other.

The clashes started when the two groups met just after Friday prayers at the city's main Qaed Ibrahim mosque.

During the battles, secular youths set fire to two buses and two cars belonging to Islamists, sending thick black smoke through the upscale city center. Under a heavy cloud of tear gas, the two sides pulled back, but then continued fighting for hours past dusk along the corniche, near the famed Alexandria Library.

At least 42 people were treated for injuries, with some rushed to the hospital, a city health official said.

N. Korea says it has detained U.S. citizen

By Jean H. Lee
Associated Press

PYONGYANG, North Korea – North Korea said Friday that an American citizen has been detained after confessing to unspecified crimes, confirming news reports about his arrest at a time when Pyongyang is facing criticism from Washington for launching a long-range rocket last week.

The American was identified as Pae Jun Ho in a brief dispatch issued by the state-run Korean Central News Agency in Pyongyang. News reports in the U.S. and South Korea said Pae is known in his home state of Washington as Kenneth Bae, a 44-year-old tour operator of Korean descent.

An expert said he is likely to become a bargaining chip for the North, an attempt to draw the U.S. into talks. Five other Americans known to have been detained in North Korea since 2009 all were eventually released.

North Korean state media said Pae arrived in the far northeastern city of Rajin on Nov. 3 as part of a tour.

Rajin is part of a special economic zone not far from Yanji, China, that has sought to draw foreign investors and tourists over the past year. Yanji, home to many ethnic Korean Chinese, also serves as a base for Christian groups that shelter North Korean defectors.

"In the process of investigation, evidence proving that he committed a crime against (North Korea) was revealed. He admitted his crime," the KCNA dispatch said.

The North said the crimes were "proven through evidence" but did not elaborate.

Mint testing metals to make coins less expensive

By Joann Loviglo
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA – When it comes to making coins, the Mint isn't getting its two cents worth. In some cases, it doesn't even get half of that.

A penny costs more than two cents and a nickel costs more than 11 cents to make and distribute. The quandary is how to make coins more cheaply without sparing our change's quality and durability, or altering its size and appearance.

A 400-page report presented last week to Congress outlines nearly two years of trials conducted at the Mint in Philadelphia, where a variety of metal recipes were put through their paces in the massive facility's high-speed coin-making machinery.

Evaluations of 29 different alloys concluded that none met the ideal list of attributes. The Treasury Department concluded that additional study was needed before it could endorse any changes.

"We want to let the data take us where it takes us," Dick Peterson, the Mint's acting director, said Wednesday. More test runs with different alloys are likely in the coming year, he said.

The government has been looking for ways to shave the millions it spends every year to make bills and coins. Congressional auditors recently suggested doing away with dollar bills entirely and replacing them with dollar coins, which they concluded could save taxpayers some $4.4 billion over three decades. Canada is dropping its penny as part of an austerity budget.

To test possible new metal combinations, the U.S. Mint struck penny-, nickel- and quarter-sized coins with "nonsense dies" — images that don't exist on legal tender (a bonneted Martha Washington is a favorite subject) but are similar in depth and design to real currency.

Test stampings were examined for color, finish, resistance to wear and corrosion, hardness and magnetic properties. That last item might be the trickiest, as coin-operated equipment such as vending machines and parking meters detect counterfeits not just by size and weight but by each coin's specific magnetic signature.

Except for pennies, all current U.S. circulating coins have the electromagnetic properties of copper, the report said.

A slight reduction in the nickel content of our quarters, dimes and nickels would bring some cost savings while keeping the magnetic characteristics the same. Making more substantial changes, like switching to steel or other alloys with different magnetic properties, could mean big savings to the government but at a big cost to coin-op businesses, Peterson said.

Briefs

Confidence hits five-month low

The University of Michigan says its consumer sentiment index for December fell to 72.9, a sharp drop from the November reading of 82.7.

The November figure was a five-year high.

Peter Newland, an economist at Barclays, says consumer confidence has dropped because of uncertainty over whether Congress and the Obama administration will reach a budget deal to avert sharp tax increases and government spending cuts set to take effect in January.

Economists said confidence could fall further if the standoff over the "fiscal cliff" persists into 2013.

Hostess expects to split up snack cakes in sale

NEW YORK – Twinkies, Wonder Bread and Devil Dogs are likely to return to shelves in coming months, but probably not under the same owners.

Hostess Brands Inc. said in bankruptcy court Friday that it's narrowing down the bids it received for its brands and expects to sell off its snack cakes and bread brands such as Wonder to separate buyers.

An investment banker for the company said a likely suitor has emerged to buy the namesake Hostess brand, which include Twinkies, Ding Dongs and Ho Hos, along with Dolly Madison, which includes Zingers and Coffee Cakes. He said a separate bidder has emerged as a possible buyer for Drake's cakes, which includes Devil Dogs and Yodels.

Hostess, based in Irving, Texas, began shuttering its operations late last month.

Delta hiring flight attendants

ATLANTA – Delta Air Lines Inc. is looking for up to 400 flight attendants, many of them for overseas flights for next summer.

Roughly one-third of the hires will be people who speak the language in some of the overseas cities where Delta flies. It's looking for speakers of Portuguese, Japanese, Mandarin, and Hindi.

Delta says it has received 22,000 applications. CEO Richard Anderson says in a message to employees that Delta is getting two applications every minute.

Delta plans to begin interviewing applicants in January, with training beginning in the spring.

Starting two years ago, Delta added 1,000 flight attendants, including recalling 425 from furlough.

The hiring doesn't mean Delta is growing. It has said it will do the same amount of flying next year as it did in 2012.

Oreo cookie maker gives CEO $10M

NEW YORK – The company that makes Oreo cookies is sweetening the pay for its CEO with a special stock award valued at $10 million.

Mondelez Inc. says in a regulatory filing that the reward recognizes Irene Rosenfeld for "top-tier performance," including the recent "highly successful" spinoff of its Kraft Foods grocery business.

Mondelez, which also makes Cadbury chocolates and Trident gum, says the pay also is intended to give her incentive to continue delivering strong results. It includes restricted stock that will vest after three years and restricted stock based on the company's performance.

Rosenfeld, who took over as CEO in 2006, received a pay package worth $15.7 million as CEO of Kraft Foods Inc. last year, according to an Associated Press calculation.

Mondelez is based in Deerfield, Ill.

COMMODITIES

Investors sent prices for gold, silver and some key agricultural commodities higher on Friday, even as they sent stocks down.

In metals, silver for March delivery rose nearly 2 percent, climbing 52.5 cents to $30.203 an ounce. February gold was also up, rising $14.20 to $1,660.10 per ounce.

Overall it was a quiet day for economic news as Christmas and the New Year's holiday loomed. With nothing else to follow, investors watched developments in the "fiscal cliff" negotiations in Washington. Republicans and Democrats have until Dec. 31 to work out a budget compromise, otherwise higher increases and government spending cuts will kick in. By Friday, hopes for a pre-Christmas deal had all but faded.

Benchmark crude for February delivery fell $1.47 to finish at $88.66 per barrel in New York, the contract's lowest point in three weeks. Brent crude, which is used to price international varieties of oil, fell $1.23 to end at $108.97 per barrel in London.

Key agricultural commodities for March delivery rose. Wheat edged up 1.5 cents to $7.92 a bushel. Corn rose 5.5 cents to $7.02 a bushel. Soybeans rose 24.5 cents, or nearly 2 percent, to $14.2925.

Stocks sink after budget vote stopped

The Associated Press

NEW YORK – Investors sent Washington a reminder Friday that Wall Street is a power player in talks to avoid the "fiscal cliff."

Stocks fell sharply after House Republicans called off a vote on tax rates and left federal budget talks in disarray 10 days before sweeping tax increases and government spending cuts are scheduled to take effect.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost as much as 189 points before closing down 120.88 points, or 0.9 percent, at 13,190.84. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 13.54 points to 1,430.15. The Nasdaq composite index declined 29.38 to 3,021.01.

Other markets registered their concern, but the reaction was not extreme. The yield on the benchmark 10-year U.S. Treasury note fell 0.04 percentage point to 1.76 percent.

The price of gold, which some investors buy when fear overtakes the market, climbed, but only by 0.9 percent. Gold rose $14.20 to $1,660.10 an ounce.

Town: Teachers can carry guns

■ 'I think it's a great idea but I hate that it has come to this'

By Angela K. Brown
Associated Press

HARROLD, Texas – In this tiny Texas town, children and their parents don't give much thought to safety at the community's lone school — mostly because some of the teachers are carrying concealed weapons.

In remote Harrold, the nearest sheriff's office is 30 minutes away, and people tend to know — and trust — one another. So the school board voted to let teachers bring guns to school.

"We don't have money for a security guard, but this is a better solution," Superintendent David Thweatt said. "A shooter could take out a guard or officer with a visible, holstered weapon, but our teachers have master's degrees, are older and have had extensive training. And their guns are hidden. We can protect our children."

In the awful aftermath of last week's Connecticut elementary school shooting, lawmakers in a growing number of states — including Oklahoma, Missouri, Minnesota, South Dakota and Oregon — have said they will consider laws allowing teachers and school administrators to carry firearms at school.

Texas law bans guns in schools unless the school has given written authorization. Arizona and six other states have similar laws with exceptions for people who have licenses to carry concealed weapons.

Harrold's school board voted unanimously in 2007 to allow employees to carry weapons. After obtaining a state concealed-weapons permit, each employee who wants to carry a weapon must be approved by the board based on his or her personality and reaction to a crisis, Thweatt said.

Employees also must undergo training in crisis intervention and hostage situations. And they must use bullets that minimize the risk of ricochet, similar to those carried by air marshals on planes.

CaRae Reinisch, who lives in the nearby community of Elliott, said she took her children out of a larger school and enrolled them in Harrold two years ago, partly because she felt they would be safer in a building with armed teachers.

"I think it's a great idea for trained teachers to carry weapons," Reinish said. "But I hate that it has come to this."

The superintendent won't disclose how many of the school's 50 employees carry weapons, saying that revealing that number might jeopardize school security.

The school, about 150 miles northwest of Fort Worth near the Oklahoma border, has 103 students from kindergarten through 12th grade. Most of them rarely think about who is carrying a gun.

"This is the first time in a long time that I've thought about it," said Matt Templeton, the principal's 17-year-old son. "And that's because of what happened" in Connecticut.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

In this Aug. 25, 2008 photo, students arrive for the first day of classes at the Harrold Independent School District in Harrold, Texas. The school has a policy allowing teachers and other employees to carry concealed weapons on campus. Some lawmakers in at least five other states are looking into similar legislation in the wake of last week's deadly elementary school shooting in Newton, Conn. Anti-gun groups oppose the measure.

Thweatt said other Texas schools allow teachers to carry weapons, but he would not reveal their locations, saying they are afraid of negative publicity.

The Texas Education Agency said it had not heard of any other schools with such a policy. And the Brady Center to Prevent Gun Violence did not know of any other districts nationwide that allow school employees to carry concealed handguns.

But that may change soon.

Oklahoma state Rep. Mark McCullough said he is working on a bill that would allow teachers and administrators to receive firearms training through the Council on Law Enforcement Education and Training, which would authorize them to carry weapons at school and at school events. Other states are proposing or considering similar measures.

However, Michigan Gov. Rick Snyder this week vetoed legislation that would have allowed concealed weapons in schools, churches and day care centers, saying he seeks a more "thoughtful review" that includes school emergency policies and mental health-related issues.

In Texas, guns have an honored place in the state's culture, and politicians often describe owning a gun as essential to being Texan. At the state Capitol, concealed handgun license holders are allowed to skip the metal detectors that scan visitors.

Gov. Rick Perry has indicated he would prefer to give gun owners the widest possible latitude. Just days after the Connecticut attack, Perry said permit holders should be able to carry concealed weapons in any public place.

Last year, many Texas lawmakers supported a plan to give college students and professors with concealed handgun licenses the right to carry guns on campus, but the measure failed.

Opponents insist that having more people armed at a school, especially teachers or administrators who aren't trained to deal with crime on a daily basis, could lead to more injuries and deaths. They point to an August shooting outside the Empire State Building, where police killed a laid-off clothing designer after he fatally shot his former colleague. Nine bystanders were wounded by police gunfire, ricochets and fragments.

"You are going to put teachers, people teaching 6-year-olds in a school, and expect them to respond to an active-shooter situation?" said Ladd Everitt, a spokesman for the Washington, D.C.-based Coalition to Stop Gun Violence, who called the idea of arming teachers "madness."

As the debate continues, Harrold's school plans to leave its policy unchanged.

"Nothing is 100 percent at all. ... But hope makes for a terrible plan, hoping that (a tragedy) won't happen," Thweatt said. "My question is: What have you done about it? How have you planned?"

Warning signs often present before violence is committed

Scripps Howard News Service

Experts say there are warning signs that a student or young adult might be prone to committing a violent act. But they caution that youths who exhibit some or even many of those behaviors and attitudes are not necessarily destined to become violent.

What is crucial for parents, friends, teachers and others is to detect changes in behavior and to intervene before harm occurs.

According to Ken Trump, president of the National School Safety and Security Services consulting firm; the FBI's National Center for the Analysis of Violent Crime, and others, here are some indicators to look out for:

- Recurrent themes of destruction, violence, hopelessness, hatred, loneliness or nihilism in a student's writing, artwork or conversation
- Unpredictable, uncontrolled or out of proportion outbursts of anger
- Lack of empathy for feelings of others
- Access to weapons or explosives
- Turbulent parent-child relationship
- History of being bullied
- Overwhelming feelings of rejection or humiliation after the end of a love relationship
- Low tolerance for frustration, poor coping skills and a lack of resiliency
- Refuses to take responsibility for his or her actions and typically blames other people, events or situations for any failings or shortcomings.

Pension funds reconsider investments in gun makers

By Michael Gormley
Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. – From California to New York, teacher and public-worker retirement funds are reconsidering their investments in gun makers and confronting an uncomfortable fact: Their pensions have supported the manufacture of deadly weapons, in some cases the same type of gun used in the Connecticut school shooting.

For years, the gun industry has been a reliable investment, attracting tens of millions of dollars from some of the nation's largest retirement funds. The firearms business has been strong, driven by relaxed laws for carrying concealed handguns and by buyers who feared that tighter gun restrictions were more likely under President Obama.

But after the bloodbath in Connecticut, the practice is under review in at least four states, including two of the most populous, California and New York.

Although the amount of money involved is relatively small compared with the size of the pension funds, it has raised questions about the social responsibilities of huge retirement systems that invest on behalf of millions of American workers.

"It's a bad investment to put money behind companies that put military-grade weapons on our streets and refuse to take responsibility for the outcome," said New York City Public Advocate Bill de Blasio. "We should not be giving capital to an industry that is responsible for the deaths of thousands of Americans each year ... it's our moral responsibility."

New York state Comptroller Thomas DiNapoli, who has sometimes wielded the state's $150.1 billion pension fund to urge companies to change their practices, is now reviewing nearly $12 million invested in firearms companies, which have seen their stocks plummet since the attack.

If they decide to dump the investments, the process is more complicated than merely liquidating stocks. Fund managers are required by law to invest in profitable companies, often without any specific power to consider social or ethical issues.

The California State Teachers' Retirement System announced Tuesday that it would review investments in the national and international firearms business.

That system had invested $600 million in the private equity firm Cerberus Capital Management, which on the same day put up for sale the gun maker known as Freedom Group International, manufacturer of the Bushmaster AR-15 military-style rifle, the weapon Adam Lanza used to kill 26 people at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Conn.

The California retirement fund also owns shares of Sturm, Ruger & Co. and Smith & Wesson Holding Corp., two publicly traded gun manufacturers. Neither company responded to requests for comment Wednesday.

The New York State Teachers' Retirement System holds nearly $3.4 million in Sturm Ruger & Co. and nearly $3 million in Olin Corp, which manufacturers Winchester arms. That's out of total assets worth $38.1 billion. A spokesman for the teachers' fund said the investment is "passive" and included in an index of funds.

Other gun makers, such as Sig Sauer and Colt, are privately held and even though regular investors generally can't invest in private companies, pension funds often do.

In Pennsylvania, the teachers' pension fund reacted quickly, contacting Cerberus about the Freedom Group even before the equity firm announced it was selling the gun maker.

The Pennsylvania fund has less than $2 million invested in Cerberus, and those holdings will soon be liquidated, an official said. Although the fund has no social investment policy, its board members became concerned after the Connecticut attack.

Freedom Group has lost money in four of the last five years but claims to be the biggest maker of "modern sporting rifles," the industry's term for military-style weapons. It estimates the market for those weapons has grown 27 percent a year from 2007 through 2011.

The company said it saw a "surge" of sales in 2009, Obama's first year in office. FBI background checks are a rough proxy for gun sales. So far this year, the agency has already done 16.8 million, double the number it performed in 2003.

HONORING THE BEST AND BRIGHTEST OF 2013
STAR STUDENT AWARD 2013

EXCEPTIONAL. IMPRESSIVE. PROMISING.

Add to this raw talent and sheer determination and what you find is the Star Student of 2013! The Courier & Press and The Gleaner are proud to continue a Tri-State tradition honoring high school juniors who have excelled in a multitude of areas in their young lives. They are on a voyage to selecting their life's path, from choosing a university to expanding their world knowledge and they deserve to be honored.

- Nominations will be accepted from December 1 through December 31. Nominations may be made by students, parents, educators and members of the community for current Tri-State high school JUNIORS. All information must be submitted online via courierpress.com

Visit www.courierpress.com/starstudent/nomination to nominate a student.

- Nominated students will have from the time of notification of nomination through February 1 to complete the application. Applications must be complete. Late or incomplete applications will not be accepted.
- An independent panel of judges will review the completed applications and score each nominee. Students will be selected for recognition based on academics, extracurricular activities, school and community leadership, volunteer service and work experience.
- In all, up to 90 students will be recognized as follows: 20 Gold Star Students, 30 Silver Star Students and 40 Bronze Star Students.
- Every Star Student will receive recognition in a full-color special section that will be inserted in the Courier & Press and The Gleaner on Sunday, May 5, 2013.
- In addition, every Star Student will be our guest of honor, along with two guests, at the Star Student Awards Banquet that same Sunday.

CLIFF

said, "we remain hopeful he (Obama) is finally ready to get serious about averting the fiscal cliff."

At the White House, Obama projected optimism as he struggled to deal with the wreckage of weeks of failed negotiations and political maneuvering. "So call me a hopeless optimist, but I actually still think we can get it done," he said of an elusive deal.

The president spoke at the end of a day in which stocks tumbled and congressional leaders squabbled as the fiscal cliff drew implacably closer.

Boehner spoke in the morning, describing the increasingly tangled attempts to beat the Jan. 1 deadline and head off the perilous combination of across-the-board tax hikes and deep spending cuts.

Obama spoke shortly before a scheduled departure to join his family in Hawaii for Christmas, but in an indication of the importance of the issue, he told reporters he would be returning to the White House next week.

He said that in his negotiations with Boehner, he had offered to meet Republicans halfway when it came to taxes, and "more than halfway" toward their target for spending cuts.

He said he remains committed to working toward a goal of longer-term deficit reduction, but in the meantime he said quick action is needed to keep taxes from rising for tens of millions.

"Averting this middle class tax hike is not a Democratic responsibility or a Republican responsibility. With their votes, the American people have decided that government is a shared responsibility," he said, referring to a Congress where power is divided between the two parties.

"We move forward together or we don't move forward at all," he added.

Progress was invisible one day after House Republican rebels thwarted Boehner's plan to prevent tax increases for all but the nation's million-dollar earners. And while neither House is expected to meet again until after Christmas, officials in both parties said there was still time to prevent the changes from kicking in with the new year.

Yet they pointedly disagreed which side needed to make the first move.

"It's time for the speaker and all Republicans to return to the negotiating table," said Senate Democratic leader Reid.

He said that, for now, Boehner should allow a vote on legislation that would block all tax increases except for individuals making more than $200,000 and couples making $250,000 — the position that Obama carried through his successful campaign for re-election.

Reid said it would pass the House with votes from lawmakers from both parties, and, separately, some Democrats said it was possible similar legislation may yet be launched in the Senate.

Moments later, Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell said Democrats had "spent all day yesterday defeating" the legislation in the House — even though Boehner himself said it had been deep-sixed by GOP opposition.

Countering Reid's offer, McConnell said the Senate should pass legislation extending tax cuts at all income levels and requiring a comprehensive overhaul of the tax code. Beyond that, he said, ""Look: It's the president's job to find a solution that can pass Congress. He's the only one who can do it."

The developments marked yet another baffling turn in a week that began with news that Obama and Boehner had significantly narrowed their differences on a plan to erase the cliff. Both were offering a cut in taxes for most Americans, an increase for a relative few and cuts of roughly $1 trillion in spending over a year.

one else that they've made an arrest. My clients have consistently indicated their innocence," he said.

Shirley and the Leonard brothers face two counts of murder as well as 33 counts of arson — one count for each of the homes damaged so badly that officials have ordered their demolition.

Curry said his office would review whether to pursue the death penalty or life in prison without parole against the three, who are scheduled to appear in court Monday.

Shirley and Mark Leonard, 43, also face two counts of conspiracy to commit arson, while Bob Leonard, 54, faces a single count. Curry said the conspiracy charges stem from the failed explosion.

He said investigators determined that Shirley's home filled up with gas after a gas fireplace valve and a gas line regulator were removed. A microwave, apparently set to start on a timer, sparked the explosion, he said.

On Friday, workers using heavy equipment were removing debris from razed homes in the neighborhood.

Doug Aldridge, the head of the Richmond Hill's crime watch group, said after a neighborhood meeting that the allegations are "more than we anticipated."

"Sometimes money makes people do stupid stuff," Aldridge said.

Investigators found that in December 2011, Shirley's home insurance policy for personal property was increased to $304,000 — an amount that was in addition to the coverage for the home itself, according to court documents.

Two homes that were leveled and the numerous neighboring homes that were damaged from a massive explosion that sparked a huge fire and killed two people are shown in Indianapolis. Two people were killed, nearly three dozen homes were damaged or destroyed, and seven people were taken to a hospital with injuries.

A probable cause affidavit says Shirley filed for bankruptcy this year but stopped making her court-arranged payments and failed to appear at a July bankruptcy hearing. The home's original loan was for $116,000 and a second mortgage was taken out on the home for $65,000, the affidavit also says.

A friend of Mark Leonard's also told investigators that Leonard would surf online dating sites "and located older, heavier women, wine and dine them," then borrowed money and never paid them back, according to the affidavit.

The friend said Shirley was aware of the scheming "and was OK with it so long as he did not sleep with the women," the affidavit says.

Leonard has a criminal record that includes stalking and intimidation and convictions on dealing and possessing cocaine, according to prison records.

Two men, one fitting Bob Leonard's description, were seen at Shirley's home the day of the explosion, and Curry indicated investigators believe that's when the gas line and valve were tampered with. He said authorities are still trying to determine the second man's identity.

Curry said that the day before the blast, the brothers asked an employee of local gas utility Citizens Energy several questions, "including the differences between propane and natural gas, the role of a regulator in a house and controlling the flow of natural gas and how much gas it would require to fill a house."

Curry said Shirley and her boyfriend had followed the same pattern two weekends in a row, visiting a southern Indiana casino, dropping off Shirley's daughter with a baby sitter and boarding the family's cat.

The day after the explosion, Bob Leonard allegedly called his son and asked him to retrieve from a white van items he said he had salvaged from Shirley's home after the blast.

"That, of course, is impossible because everything in the house was destroyed," Curry said. "Plus no one was allowed access to the property after the explosion."

KERRY
from 1A

did not attend the White House event.

In a statement, Clinton said, "John Kerry has been tested — in war, in government, and in diplomacy. Time and again, he has proven his mettle."

Obama settled on Kerry for the job even though it could cause a political problem for Democrats in Massachusetts. Kerry's move to State would open the Senate seat he has held for five terms, giving Republicans an opportunity to take advantage. Recently defeated GOP Sen. Scott Brown would be his party's clear favorite in a special election.

Kerry would join a national security team in flux, with Obama expected to choose a new defense secretary and director of the Central Intelligence Agency in the coming weeks.

The 69-year-old Kerry already has deep relationships with many world leaders, formed both during his Senate travels and as an unofficial envoy for Obama. The president has called upon Kerry in particular to diffuse diplomatic disputes in Afghanistan and Pakistan, two countries that will be at the forefront of Obama's foreign policy agenda early in his second term.

At times, Kerry has been more forward-leaning than Obama on foreign policy issues. He was an early advocate of an international "no-fly zone" over Libya in 2011 and among the first U.S. lawmakers to call for Egyptian strongman Hosni Mubarak to leave power as pro-democracy protests grew. Obama later backed both positions.

Kerry would take over at a State Department grappling with the deaths of the U.S. ambassador to Libya and three other Americans during a September attack on the consulate in Benghazi, Libya. Kerry, during a hearing on the attacks Thursday, hinted at how he would manage U.S. diplomatic personnel working in unstable regions.

"There will always be a tension between the diplomatic imperative to get `outside the wire' and the security standards that require our diplomats to work behind high walls," he said. "Our challenge is to strike a balance between the necessity of the mission, available resources and tolerance for risk."

His only other rival for the job, U.N. Ambassador Susan Rice, faced harsh criticism from congressional Republicans for her initial accounting of the consulate attack. Obama vigorously defended Rice, a close friend and longtime adviser, but GOP senators dug in, threatening to hold up her nomination if the president tapped her for the post.

Rice withdrew her name from consideration last week, making Kerry all but certain to become the nominee. People familiar with the White House's decision-making said support within the administration was moving toward Kerry even before Rice pulled out.

The National Rifle Association executive vice president Wayne LaPierre pauses as he makes a statement during a news conference in response to the Connecticut school shootings on Friday in Washington. armed police officer in every school. Meanwhile, he said the NRA would develop a school emergency response program that would include volunteers from the group's 4.3 million members to help guard children.

His armed-officers idea was immediately lambasted by gun control advocates, and not even the NRA's point man on the effort seemed willing to go so far. Former Republican Rep. Asa Hutchinson of Arkansas, whom LaPierre named national director of the program, said in an interview that decisions about armed guards in schools should be made by local districts.

"I think everyone recognizes that an armed presence in schools is sometimes appropriate," Hutchinson said.

"That is one option. I would never want to have a mandatory requirement for every school district to have that."

Hutchinson said he'll offer a plan in January that will consider other measures such as biometric entry points, patrols and consideration of school layouts to protect security.

LaPierre argued that guards need to be in place quickly because "the next Adam Lanza," the suspected shooter in Newtown, Conn., is already planning an attack on another school.

While there is a federally maintained database of the mentally ill — people so declared by their states — a 1997 Supreme Court ruling that states can't be required to contribute information has left significant gaps. In any case, creation of a mandatory national database probably would have had little impact on the ability of suspected shooters in four mass shootings since 2011 to get and use powerful weapons.

The other people accused either stole the weapons used in the attacks or had not been ruled by courts to be "mentally defective" before the shootings.

New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg said the NRA is blaming everyone but itself for a national gun crisis and is offering "a paranoid, dystopian vision of a more dangerous and violent America where everyone is armed and no place is safe."

Washington sparks HCHS late in 67-59 triumph over Panthers

HARTFORD, Ky. – Short-handed and reeling from a disappointing first-round loss, Henderson County used a fourth-quarter spark from D.J. Washington to beat Russellville 67-59 Friday afternoon in Ohio County's Danny Annis Memorial Eagle Classic.

The sophomore point guard scored all of his team-high 16 points in the second half and posted 12 of those in the final period after the 4-6 Panthers had taken a 42-21 lead.

"He played with the confidence we need him to play with. He was a leader from the point guard position," Henderson County coach Tyler Smithhart said. "He did a good job of attacking when it was there and getting into the offense and pitching when it was there."

Washington put Henderson County in front for good at 45-44 with 6:26 to go on a pair of free throws. For the game, Washington was 4-of-4 from the foul line as the team hit 9-of-16 — a significant improvement on the 3-of-13 performance in Thursday's 47-45 loss to Calloway County.

"I think it helped that we practiced on our free throws this morning," said Washington, who confirmed that each player was required to shoot 100 free throws in Friday morning's workout.

Smithhart credited his interior players' work for making the way for Washington. "Our big guys did a good job of creating space for him," he said.

The Colonels played for the second straight game without junior forward Kaleb Duckworth, who injured his ankle in the first quarter of Thursday's game. Duckworth is expected to be out through next week's Ashland Invitational.

The Colonels also played without sophomore guard D.J. Smith, who was benched for what Smithhart described as a "coach's decision."

Russellville, which erased a seven-point halftime deficit with a 16-5 run to start the second half, made 64 percent (16-of-25) of its shots from the field in the first three quarters but cooled off considerably in the fourth quarter. The Panthers were 4-of-16 (25 percent) in the fourth quarter and finished the game at 49 percent.

After the Colonels opened up a six-point lead early in the fourth quarter, the Panthers pulled back within one at 54-53 with 4:02 to go. An 8-2 run put Henderson County back in control as Jalen Grimes made a fast-break layup off a defensive rebound and was fouled. He missed the free throw but Brady Norman put it back in. After two free throws by Russellville, Washington scored in the paint on an assist by Hunter Comer, then Norman followed with a driving basket.

The Colonels picked up seven points off the bench from Norman with five coming in the game's final 3:15. "Brady Norman did a great job. He played with a lot of confidence and poise down the stretch. He made a lot of great decisions," Smithhart said.

The Colonel bench provided 30 points, including 14 from Corey Sanners and nine from Rick Armstead. Each hit three 3-pointers — all in the first half.

Besides Washington, Cain Cooper was the only other starter in double figures as he scored 10.

Four of Russellville's starters scored in double figures led by Jordan Kennedy, who scored 16 points and had eight rebounds.

Henderson County was 26-of-61 from the field for 43 percent.

Henderson County plays Lake County, Tenn., in the fifth-place game today at 2:30 p.m. Lake County beat Butler County 59-54 in Friday's other game in the consolation bracket.

Mid-major returnees thriving

Murray star Canaan does not regret not going to NBA

By Aaron Beard
Associated Press

Murray State's Isaiah Canaan, Lehigh's C.J. McCollum and Creighton's Doug McDermott are making headlines for mid-major programs instead of trying to find supporting roles as NBA rookies.

The three Associated Press preseason All-Americans all returned to school instead of entering the NBA draft. They knew there was a good chance they could have fallen out of the first round, making it even harder to succeed in the league without a guaranteed contract. Instead, they're focused on helping their teams top last year's runs to the NCAA tournament — which could ultimately help their pro prospects, too.

All three are averaging better than 21 points per game while their teams are a combined 29-4 to start the year.

"I don't regret not going to the NBA," Canaan said. "I've got five young guys with me and I know it's not going to be the best early, right now. But we're not worried about early. We want them to be at their best in the later part of the season. I'm trying every day to make them better because I'm going to need them, we're going to need them."

Ryan Blake, senior director of NBA scouting operations, said the odds of a player making an NBA roster drop significantly if he slides out of the first round and misses out on the guaranteed three-year contract that comes with that perch.

Blake said Canaan and McCollum, now seniors, would've fallen into the risky late-first/early-second category in a strong draft after last season. NBA rules prohibit Blake from talking about McDermott, who is a junior.

"My philosophy is if you're projected as a low first-round or second round (pick), that means you may not get drafted," Blake said. "That's how the variable is in the NBA — especially in last year's draft.

"Then again, it's not that big of a deal if you're enjoying college, if you're able to hone your skills and improve and so forth. I think that adds a lot. Maturity adds a lot."

It's guys like Canaan, McCollum and McDermott — experienced players with developed games — that fuel March Madness as the scary upstarts facing big-name programs often led by young talent. Just ask Duke.

McCollum scored 30 points to lead the 15th-seeded Mountain Hawks past the Blue Devils in Duke's home state last March.

The 6-foot-3 guard became the Patriot League's all-time leading scorer earlier this season. He entered the week leading the country by averaging 24.9 points per game on 51 percent shooting.

McCollum, who was held out of Lehigh's 90-75 win over North Texas Thursday night with a sprained ankle, said last year he returned to school because he had promised his parents he would earn his degree. In addition, his family was financially stable and didn't desperately need the money that comes with an NBA contract.

He said he got "mixed feedback" on his pro prospects, though it was hard to learn much considering the deadline to stay in the draft came before prospects were allowed to work out for teams.

"Some scouts said I should strike while it's hot and leave school," McCollum said. "Some said I should stay and try and improve. ... With the way the draft is set up now, you can't get workouts unless you're all the way in. That put us at a disadvantage. It really hurts."

McDermott, a 6-8 forward, wasn't in a rush, either. After averaging nearly 23 points and eight rebounds last season while leading Creighton to the third round of the NCAA tournament, he's averaging about 23 points and seven rebounds this year for the No. 17 Bluejays.

"I had my mind made right after the season," McDermott said. "I knew I wasn't ready for (the NBA) quite yet and there's a lot of stuff I still want to accomplish here at Creighton. ... I think we can do some special things and take this program where it's never been before, so that's my main priority.

"It's hard not to think about the next level, but for now I'm still in college and I'm going to make the most of it."

His father, Creighton coach Greg McDermott, also pointed out that his son "doesn't have any bills to pay, so he doesn't have to be in a hurry."

"These years could very well be the best years of his life," Greg McDermott said, "so he's enjoying every second of it."

Canaan, a 6-1 senior, averaged about 19 points to lead Murray State's charge into the national rankings last year. He's upped that average to around 21 points this year for the Racers.

All three ranked among the nation's top seven scorers entering the week.

Cardinals and Toppers going an extra hour south

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

Playing a rival sometimes requires going the extra mile.

With No. 5 Louisville and Western Kentucky, it means going an extra hour south.

The Cardinals and Hilltoppers resume their annual rivalry Saturday night at Bridgestone Arena in Nashville, Tenn. The game is part of a series in which Louisville hosts two games, WKU one on campus with one in the Music City.

Louisville (10-1) has become used to playing at neutral sites this season. The Cardinals played three games last month at the Battle 4 Atlantis tournament in the Bahamas, losing to Duke in the championship game.

Saturday also marks the Cardinals' second trip to Tennessee in a week. They beat rival Memphis last Saturday.

Western Kentucky (8-4) leads the series 39-36, including 5-2 on neutral courts. Which is exactly why Louisville coach Rick Pitino likes this game.

"With the exception of one time, Western Kentucky always plays us tough," Pitino said Friday. "They played us tough at home last year, beat us once at home and we know it's going to be a great basketball game. And we look forward to progressing from the last game we played against FIU."

Pitino said he was encouraged by Louisville's play in the 79-55 victory over a Florida International team coached by his son Richard. The Cardinals outshot the Panthers 49 percent to 33 percent, scored 25 points off 14 turnovers and were solid from 3-point range (12 of 32) in winning their fifth straight game.

Sophomore forwards Wayne Blackshear and Chane Behanan combined for 32 points and 19 rebounds, providing another nice effort while center Gorgui Dieng continues recovering from a broken left wrist. Although the 6-foot-11 junior has dressed the past few games and has been working out with the Cardinals, Pitino still doesn't expect him back until January.

"If he's able to play, he'll play," senior point guard Peyton Siva said about Dieng. "Right now, we're not trying to rush him back. We need him more for the end of the season than right now."

Three Cols receive honorable mention

Henderson County had three players selected as honorable mention on The Associated Press' all-state football team, which was announced on Friday.

Senior Cade Wilke was selected as a linebacker where he led the team with 115 tackles.

Senior Keileen Chappell was an honorable mention pick at running back after rushing for 1,427 yards and scoring 16 touchdowns.

Sophomore Nick Gregory was honorable mention as a kicker after making 48-of-52 PATs and connecting on 7-of-10 field goals.

Andersen to be 'fly on the wall'

MADISON, Wis. – New Wisconsin coach Gary Andersen says he will be a "fly on the wall" during Rose Bowl preparations.

Andersen was introduced Friday as the Badgers' new coach. He will take over for Bret Bielema, who left for Arkansas earlier this month.

Athletic director and former Badgers coach Barry Alvarez is coaching the team in the Rose Bowl against Stanford at the request of players.

Andersen says he will not interfere with Alvarez's preparations for the game on New Year's Day. Andersen says, "These kids need to go win a Rose Bowl. The last thing they need for me is to hang around Coach Alvarez."

Colts awaiting Pagano's return

INDIANAPOLIS – The Indianapolis Colts are hoping to get head coach Chuck Pagano back Monday, and all indications are that he will be.

After being medically cleared by his physician, the decision about when to return and how much to do is up to Pagano and the Colts. While interim coach Bruce Arians told reporters Friday that Pagano's return is "still up in the air," he noted that Pagano felt "pretty solid" and that he was "ready to go."

Players expect to see him at a team meeting Monday morning — a meeting that promises to be both joyous and emotional.

NCAA suspends Texas' Kabongo

INDIANAPOLIS – The NCAA has suspended Texas basketball player Myck Kabongo for 23 games for accepting impermissible benefits and providing false statements during an investigation into the infractions.

The Division I committee on student-athlete reinstatement announced the suspension Friday.

Kabongo also must repay $475 to a charity of his choice. The suspension includes the 10 games he has already missed.

Indiana thumps FAU 88-52

Notre Dame, Tennessee also triumph

Wire reports

Cody Zeller had 24 points and six rebounds, leading four Indiana players into double figures and the sixth-ranked Hoosiers routed Florida Atlantic 88-52.

The Hoosiers (11-1) have won 29 straight home games against nonconference foes.

Since losing to Butler on Saturday, the Hoosiers have shot a combined 64 of 106 from the field (60.4 percent).

Florida Atlantic (5-7) was led by Greg Gantt, who scored 25 points. Gantt has 1,556 career points, three behind all-time leader Earnest Crumbley.

Zeller tied the score at 6 and broke the tie with a three-point play that sent Indiana on a 20-2 run that made it 24-8.

ALAN PETERSIME/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Florida Atlantic's Kelvin Penn and Indiana's Will Sheehey scramble for a loose ball during the first half of their game in Bloomington, Ind., on Friday night. Indiana won 88-52.

Florida Atlantic never got closer than 13 the rest of the game.

■ Notre Dame 89, Niagara 67: Jack Cooley had 24 points and 15 rebounds, both season highs, to lead No. 22 Notre Dame to an 89-67 win over Niagara on Friday night.

The 6-foot-9 senior jumped out to a quick start, tying his season-high game total of 20 points by halftime. The Fighting Irish led 42-34 at the break.

■ Tennessee 66, Western Carolina 52: Jordan McRae scored 14 points Friday night as Tennessee capitalized on a big disparity at the free-throw line and defeated Western Carolina 66-52 for its 300th all-time win at Thompson-Boling Arena.

The Volunteers (7-3) are 300-104 at Thompson-Boling Arena, their home floor since the 1987-88 season.

■ Eastern Ky. 73, High Point 70: Mike DiNunno pieced together a second straight career performance as Eastern Kentucky held off High Point for a 73-70 nonconference victory Friday night.

DiNunno scored 22 points, matching his total from Wednesday's game against North Carolina A&T, which marked a career high for a regulation contest. The senior hit 4 of 9 from 3-point range Friday.

■ Connecticut 88, Fordham 73: Ryan Boatright scored a career-high 26 points and added nine assists as Connecticut routed Fordham 88-73 Friday night.

The Huskies (9-2) used a suffocating defense to force 21 Fordham turnovers while making 15 steals.

■ Kentucky women 66, UC Santa Barbara 38: A'dia Mathies scored 19 points and No. 7 Kentucky extended its winning streak to nine games Friday with a 66-38 victory over UC Santa Barbara.

■ Louisville women 106, Wagner 32: Megan Deines scored 19 points as eight of No. 14 Louisville's nine players scored in double figures Friday night in a 106-32 rout of Wagner.

Melo, others are tossed in Bulls' victory

Wire reports

New York's Carmelo Anthony and three others were thrown out of a foul-filled game, and the Chicago Bulls beat the Knicks for the second time this season, 110-106 on Friday night.

Knicks center Tyson Chandler and Bulls counterpart Joakim Noah were tossed after a fourth-quarter altercation, shortly after New York coach Mike Woodson had been ejected following his second technical.

Luol Deng had season highs of 29 points and 13 rebounds for the Bulls. Anthony finished with 29 points on 10-of-25 shooting.

■ Pacers 99, Cavaliers 89: Roy Hibbert scored 18 points and Lance Stephenson added a season-high 16 to lead the Indiana Pacers over the Cleveland Cavaliers, who lost their sixth straight game.

■ Raptors 93, Magic 90: DeMar DeRozan scored 17 points, Jose Calderon had 13 points and nine assists and the Toronto Raptors won their fifth straight game.

■ Pistons 100, Wizards 68: Greg Monroe had 15 points and nine rebounds and rookie Andre Drummond added a double-double as the Detroit Pistons ended a six-game losing streak.

■ Bucks 99, Celtics 94: Monta Ellis scored five of his 27 points in overtime and the Milwaukee Bucks beat the Boston Celtics in the teams' final meeting this season.

■ 76ers 99, Hawks 80: Thaddeus Young had 18 points and 11 rebounds, and Evan Turner scored 21 points to help the Philadelphia 76ers beat the Atlanta Hawks.

Bortles stars, UCF rolls in Beef 'O' Brady's Bowl

Wire reports

Blake Bortles threw for three touchdowns and ran for a fourth to lead Central Florida to a 38-17 rout of Ball State in the Beef 'O' Brady's Bowl on Friday night.

Bortles threw first-half TD passes of 7 and 5 yards to Latavius Murray, who also scored on a 2-yard run to help the Knights (10-4) win their final game as a member of Conference USA.

Ball State (9-4) was hoping to finish with at least 10 wins for the third time in school history, however its high-powered offense sputtered while being held to a season-low point total.

■ New Orleans Bowl: Even as quarterback Terrance Broadway celebrated Louisiana-Lafayette's first bowl victory at college football's highest level one year ago, there was a part of him left unfulfilled.

As a transfer, all Broadway could do was watch, and he says that hurt. His first chance to lead the Ragin' Cajuns in a postseason game comes Saturday when the Ragin' Cajuns (8-4) make their second-straight appearance in the New Orleans Bowl, this time against East Carolina (8-4) of Conference USA.

■ Las Vegas Bowl: Once again, Boise State is in this gambling city for a bowl game to end yet another successful season. Unlike previous years, though, no one is talking about where the Broncos should really be.

There is no BCS controversy for the No. 20 Broncos coming into the Las Vegas Bowl to play Washington. No talk about Boise State being in the chase for a national title, either.

Falcons a victory away from home-field advantage in NFC

By Larry Lage
Associated Press

DETROIT – The Atlanta Falcons have proven they're good enough to dominate a division leader.

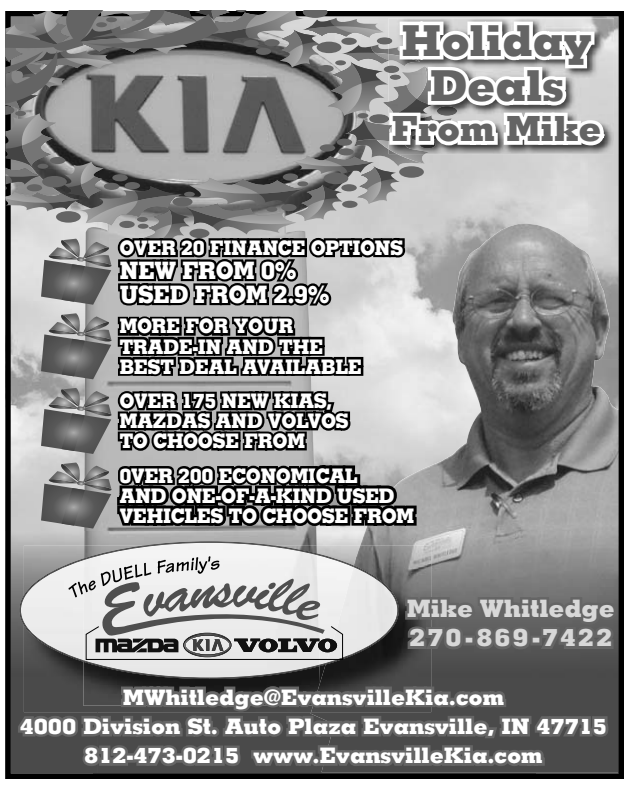

Atlanta is coming off a 34-0 victory over New York Giants, putting the NFC South champions within a win of earning home-field advantage throughout the conference playoffs.

The Falcons, though, showed the previous week just how vulnerable they can be against one of the NFC's worst teams, losing by double digits to the Carolina Panthers.

"You can't just show up if you're going to beat a team," Atlanta tight end Tony Gonzalez said. "Maybe we learned that at Carolina. Maybe that loss was something good for us."

The Falcons (12-2) will find out soon if they learned their lesson.

It would be easy to overlook the lowly Detroit Lions (4-10) because they have lost six straight and were bad enough to lose to Arizona last week 38-10, allowing the Cardinals to end a nine-game slide.

Douglas top female athlete

Gold-medal winning gymnast edges out Franklin for AP honor

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press

When Gabby Douglas allowed herself to dream of being the Olympic champion, she imagined having a nice little dinner with family and friends to celebrate. Maybe she'd make an appearance here and there.

"I didn't think it was going to be crazy," Douglas said, laughing. "I love it. But I realized my perspective was going to have to change."

Just a bit.

The teenager has become a worldwide star since winning the Olympic all-around title in London, the first African-American gymnast to claim gymnastics' biggest prize. And now she has earned another honor. Douglas was selected The Associated Press' female athlete of the year, edging out swimmer Missy Franklin in a vote by U.S. editors and news directors that was announced Friday.

"I didn't realize how much of an impact I made," said Douglas, who turns 17 on Dec. 31. "My mom and everyone said, 'You really won't know the full impact until you're 30 or 40 years old.' But it's starting to sink in."

In a year filled with standout performances by female athletes, those of the pint-sized gymnast shined brightest. Douglas received 48 of 157 votes, seven more than Franklin, who won four gold medals and a bronze in London. Serena Williams, who won Wimbledon and the U.S. Open two years after her career was nearly derailed by a series of health problems, was third (24).

Britney Griner, who led Baylor to a 40-0 record and the NCAA title, and skier Lindsey Vonn each got 18 votes. Sprinter Allyson Felix, who won three gold medals in London, and Carli Lloyd, who scored both U.S. goals in the Americans' 2-1 victory over Japan in the gold-medal game, also received votes.

JULIE JACOBSON/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gabby Douglas, who became the first African-American gymnast to win the all-around Olympic title, is The Associated Press 2012 female athlete of the year.

"One of the few years the women's (Athlete of the Year) choices are more compelling than the men's," said Julie Jag, sports editor of the Santa Cruz Sentinel.

Douglas is the fourth gymnast to win one of the AP's annual awards, which began in 1931, and first since Mary Lou Retton in 1984. She also finished 15th in voting for the AP sports story of the year.

Douglas wasn't even in the conversation for the Olympic title at the beginning of the year. That all changed in March when she upstaged reigning world champion and teammate Jordyn Wieber at the American Cup in New York, showing off a new vault, an ungraded uneven bars routine and a dazzling personality that would be a hit on Broadway and Madison Avenue.

She finished a close second to Wieber at the U.S. championships, then beat her two weeks later at the Olympic trials. With each competition, her confidence grew. So did that smile.

By the time the Americans got to London, Douglas had emerged as the most consistent gymnast on what was arguably the best team the U.S. has ever had.

She posted the team's highest score on all but one event in qualifying. She was the only gymnast to compete in all four events during team finals, when the Americans beat the Russians in a rout for their second Olympic title, and first since 1996. Two nights later, Douglas claimed the grandest prize of all, joining Retton, Carly Patterson and Nastia Liukin as what Bela Karolyi likes to call the "Queen of Gymnastics."

Trinity wideout Quick is Kentucky's Mr. Football

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

Louisville Trinity had Plan B ready for the Class 6A state championship game just in case James Quick's rib injury prevented him from playing.

Turns out the Shamrocks were able to stick with their original strategy against Pleasure Ridge Park.

After being cleared to return earlier that week and catching a few balls during warmups, Quick went out and helped Trinity rout PRP 61-7 for its third consecutive state title. The senior wide receiver caught three passes for 83 yards and two touchdowns as the Shamrocks (13-1) won their 22nd championship.

For the 6-foot-1, 180-pound Quick, the game capped a stellar season including 1,416 yards and 16 TDs on 85 receptions.

It also clinched his selection as Kentucky's Mr. Football by members of the Associated Press.

"I was happier that we won the championship," said Quick, who closed his football career with 267 receptions for 4,209 yards and 52 touchdowns. "The key was just going out and having fun. I tried to touch up on my skills and improve in every area."

Already known for his 4.4-second speed in the 40, Quick said this season was focused on sharpening his ability to separate from defenders and running tighter routes. He also gained 10 pounds of muscle.

Quick's next step is deciding where to play in college. His choices are Louisville — where his father, Rhonyia, ran track and played football — Ohio State and Oregon.

Louisville coach Pitino supports gun control

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

Count Rick Pitino among basketball coaches supporting gun control.

The Louisville coach was asked Friday about his reaction to Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim's comments Monday assailing the nation's gun culture following last week's school shooting massacre in Newtown, Conn. Pitino agreed with Boeheim, and said he couldn't understand why people wouldn't support gun control.

On consecutive days, Boeheim and Winthrop coach Pat Kelsey used postgame news conferences to express sympathy for victims' families and stress the need for reforms to avoid another tragedy.

Pitino followed by adding that society doesn't need guns.

He says, "The fact that every single person does not want it would be a mystery. This is not the beginning of American civilization where we need guns like it's the wild, wild West."

Pitino said he was unaware of Boeheim's comments following the Syracuse coach's milestone 900th career victory Monday night. Told what his colleague said, Pitino said Boeheim was right and similarly expressed empathy for victims' families.

The Louisville coach seemed saddened over the grieving process the town is going through, believing it might never end. He said he still grieves for brother-in-law Billy Minardi, who died in the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks on the World Trade Center in New York.

Pitino created an annual game in Minardi's honor — beating his son, Richard, and Florida International on Wednesday night — but said he thinks about his good friend every day.

PRP's Jason Hiser voted top Kentucky prep coach

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

Jason Hiser always believed he could bring Pleasure Ridge Park back from tragedy.

The challenge was convincing prospective players to buy into the rebuilding process.

Hiser took over the football program at the Louisville school in 2009 after former coach Jason Stinson was charged with reckless homicide following the heat-related death of Max Gilpin the year before. Stinson was acquitted, but Hiser had to start over with a small staff and no junior varsity.

Two losing seasons followed before PRP reached the second round of the Class 6A playoffs. The Panthers went even further this year, going 14-0 and reaching their first state championship game before losing 61-7 to Louisville Trinity.

"It was the most exciting year here for football," said Hiser, chosen Coach of the Year by a statewide panel of Associated Press members. "To have the staff that I had and the support of the school and the players, it was very rewarding."

Hiser was a PRP assistant coach at the time of Gilpin's death. After becoming head coach, his simple goal was finding players willing to put in the commitment to make the Panthers competitive.

Advice

Office doesn't have to hide candy from overindulging wife

COLUMNIST

Dear Amy: I am writing this for my wife, who is afraid of suffering repercussions at work. She works in a professional office with about 30 people. She likes her job, is well respected and gets along well with her colleagues.

One of my wife's coworkers insists on keeping a bowl full of chocolate candies in a common area located where my wife can see it while working at her desk. She passes by it every time she enters or leaves her office.

The temptation has proven too much for her, and she succumbs to eating an average of three pieces of candy a day. Her candy habit has proven detrimental to her ability to keep away excess pounds.

She has asked her colleague to move the candy bowl to another location or to bring in some healthier snacks, but he refused and told my wife that she should have enough self-control not to eat it.

She took her complaint to the office manager, but he refused to have the candy moved and told her that she needed to be less rigid.

My wife tried to get some of her colleagues to back her up, but they are all too afraid of the political repercussions of confronting the office manager.

I love my wife and will continue to love her regardless, but I think this office candy situation is potentially detrimental to her health.

— PO'd Husband

Dear Husband: The world does not owe your wife, or any of us, an environment scrubbed free of risk or temptations. Following bans on smoking, profanity, alcohol, allergens, sharp edges and hurt feelings in the workplace, your wife would now like her company to remove chocolate from her sight line lest she overindulge.

Your wife's manager could have easily "fixed" this by asking her coworker to keep his candy stash in his own office, but, for whatever reason, this is not happening.

Now it is her job to accept this state of affairs, and if she cannot mitigate the bowl of chocolate with a bowl of apples placed next to it, then she should simply factor in those three pieces of chocolate and eat less at other times or exercise more.

In short, I'm suggesting that she accept reality and take responsibility for working around it.

Dear Amy: Early in the summer our family received a "Save the Date" card announcing the late December wedding of some friends. We were delighted. Now we have not received an actual invitation to the wedding. We know mutual friends who have. Should we assume we're not invited? Should we inquire about our invitation?

— Baffled

Dear Baffled: Definitely inquire.

Many medicines available for relief of neuropathy pain

COLUMNIST

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: I am an 87-year-old woman, very active and in good health. I still maintain my own home, mow my lawn and bowl three times a week.

My problem is damaged nerves in my feet. They keep me awake at night.

My doctor prescribed amitriptyline. It's addicting. I do not want to be an addict. Is there anything I can do to ease the burning of my feet?

— E.D.

Dear E.D.: Did your doctor say that you had neuropathy?

Neuropathic pain does come from damaged nerves, and the damage can take many forms.

Amitriptyline isn't considered an addicting drug. It doesn't affect your thinking or your perception.

Its main use is for depression. Many depressed people have used it for years and years, and have not developed an addiction to it.

Doctors discovered that amitriptyline controls the pain of neuropathy in many cases. You ought to give it a try.

For treating neuropathy, a lower-than-usual dose is used, and it's most often given at night.

It will help you get to sleep. Another medicine used for neuropathic pain control is Cymbalta. It, too, belongs to the family of antidepressants.

Seizure-control medicines like Neurontin and Lyrica also are pain-control medicines.

They are not addicting. It might seem strange that drugs can successfully treat unrelated illnesses, but there are many examples of drugs used for two or more unrelated conditions.

Perhaps you have heard of lidocaine, the medicine used to deaden sensations when a tooth is drilled or an incision of the skin is made.

Lidocaine comes in patches that can be applied to the skin over the painful area. That's another possibility you have for relief of neuropathy.

Reader offers gift ideas for nursing home, assisted living patients

COLUMNIST

Dear Heloise: I am a nursing assistant, and I work in a nursing home. With the holidays here, I thought I would suggest a few gift ideas for residents of nursing, assisted-living and group homes that are really appreciated.

I know many organizations and families get flowers at the holidays and even gift baskets for the residents.

However, a lot of these items are wasted. So, here are a few ideas from a caregiver:

■ Socks: Feet are always cold, and socks get lost in the laundry. Place name on the socks.

■ Shawls for women: It can be cold sitting up during the day, and these will cover the shoulders.

■ Blankets: Either lap or bed blankets that can provide a "touch of home" or a "hug" from friends and family.

■ Slippers: Again, because feet get cold, and circulation is bad.

■ Sweaters: Made from sweatshirt material. These wash very well and are warm.

— A Reader in Maryland

Dear Reader: How right you are! And when buying shirts and sweaters, try not to get "pullover" types. They are difficult to get on and off. Other suggestions, readers?

— Heloise

Dear Heloise: To save time searching for keys in my purse, I bought a carabiner and attached them to it. It matches my purse and keeps my keys safely inside and close to the top. Many of us have cars that need fobs for unlocking/locking. I got the carabiner for $1 in a clearance box at the local hardware store.

— Mary, via email

Dear Mary: I use them for all kinds of projects! My husband, David, introduced me to them when we were hot-air ballooning!

— Heloise

Dear Readers: Karen Demyanovich, via email, sent a photo of her dog Dudley getting his nails trimmed for a nursing-home visit. Karen says: "Dudley looks like I do when they take blood — just do it! He is such a good sport about everything." To see Dudley getting his manicure, visit my website at www.Heloise.com and click on "Pets."

— Heloise

Dear Heloise: Here's my trick to make a crispy, "made from scratch"-tasting treat from commercial cookie dough. Follow the manufacturer's baking directions. Turn off the oven, slightly prop open the door and remove the cookie tray after about 10 minutes.

The cookies will set nicely, without burning, and keep deliciously crisp in a container.

— Jeannie in Kingwood, Texas

Dear Heloise: Last year for my granddaughter's birthday party, my daughter-in-law had a great idea for her boxes of used broken crayons. She bought a couple of plastic candy molds, and we melted down different colors of crayons and poured them into the molds, making new crayons for the treat bags.

The kids really loved them, and no wasted crayons! There are so many different molds out there; you can find them for just about any party theme.

Horoscope

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY: (Dec. 22). Because you want the person you love to be your best friend, you'll strive to create a relationship that works on many levels and will find much success with this endeavor this year. January and May are your luckiest months financially. The professional success you'll have in March is a dream come true. Aquarius and Libra people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 7, 39, 41, 35 and 20.

ARIES: (March 21-April 19). Everything can be dangerous: drinking too much water, sitting too long in the same position, playing video games. It's something to tell those who worry about the risk you're taking.

TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). You don't look in the rearview mirror when you're driving forward, and you don't bring up childhood pain when you're trying to make a grownup impression. Others will learn from your dignified approach.

GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). You'll enjoy listening to people talk about what's going on in their lives and/or businesses. You'll learn tips and gain insights that you can apply immediately.

CANCER: (June 22-July 22). The future looks bright, but not so bright that you can't make out the details. You'll spend time in the vision of your tomorrows, working out a few details in the process.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). You may be the cat of the zodiac, but some people will encounter you as more of an armadillo: highly armored. It's appropriate that you ward off certain elements, and you're better off for the selectively protective stance.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You learned this long ago: If you find yourself wrestling the urge to change someone, the best thing to do is change yourself. Seek guidance and encouragement to reinforce the process.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You'll take a step back and assess your energetic investments. If you give energy to a person or endeavor that doesn't feed your soul in any way, you are stealing energy from yourself.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You're not always the best judge of what will bring you pleasure. You'll find yourself in an extremely pleasant scenario. You didn't want or plan this, but it is wonderful!

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). The change you want in a certain relationship is becoming clearer with each new development. A new aim is born out of a simple wish to be in a different spot one year from now.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Set a tone for relationships. There will be something to nip in the bud. If you put up with someone's bad behavior long enough, it will eventually get worse.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You wisely realize that the one who looks like a giant may feel like a little kid inside. You sense how people feel about themselves and strive to help them improve the feeling.

PISCES: (Feb. 19-March 20). "Get rich quick" schemes almost never work, because to have a successful venture, you absolutely must spend time on it. Passion is important to your success, but time is the most critical ingredient.

As Christmas nears, remember Jesus, greatest gift of all

BILLY EDWARDS
COLUMNIST

Merry Christmas! Yes, it's that time of year again, as hard as it is to believe. It is time to be glad and rejoice. It is a time to spread and to share a little goodwill and cheer with our neighbor.

But how do we do this? How can we be happy and gay when there are so many bad things happening in our world today. Everywhere you look these days, you see pain, sorrow and tragedy.

We feel anguish about the horrible events that transpired in Newtown, Conn., with the shooting of 20 young children and seven adults, including the shooter's own mother.

It is hard to understand just what caused this 20-year-old to go on a shooting rampage like this and we probably never will, at lease to the satisfaction of the grieving families who lost loved ones in this deadly massacre. Our hearts ache with pain when something as bad as this happens, especially when it happens to children who knew or did no wrong.

In no way am I trying to justify this young man's actions, but for someone who is mentally sick and unstable, there are never any good explanations for what they do.

Our prayers and thoughts are with the families who are spending their Christmas in mourning and for a grieving nation that feels their pain.

May the God of all peace and comfort be near them and bless them always with His abiding love. We pray that they find solace in the fact that their loved ones are in the presence of a loving God and are free from fear and harm.

God is never far away. He is always near and He hears us when we cry unto Him with a sincere and open heart. This is the reason He came. Before the foundation of the world, God knew that man, whom He created, would fall and would need a Savior to redeem man from his sins. At just the right point in time, God chose a virgin named Mary to bear His Son in human form.

We are told in Matthew 1 that an angel came to Joseph, Mary's soon-to-be husband, and told him, "And she shall bring forth a son, and you shall call his name JESUS: for he shall save people from their sins. Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying 'Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us'" (Matt. 1:21-23).

We don't have go around wondering where God is; we know where He is. He is in the midst of His people. While God doesn't always shield us from the dangers and catastrophes of human existence.

He does promise to be with us. He walks with us and at times He has to carry us to safety by holding us near to Him and out of the way of danger and harm.

The Scripture says, "Whether we die or live, we are the Lord's." We belong to Him by the new birth. Children belong to Him until they reach the age of accountability.

Jesus said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not, to come unto me: for such is the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 19:14).

No matter how old we are, we never outgrow the Lord. The Bible says, "Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than man" (I Cor. 1:25).

God, our heavenly Father, is so far more superior to anything we know or can fathom. We can't even begin to imagine how great, mighty and powerful our God is.

We should not be so presumptuous onto God so as to bring Him down to our level by saying, "My way is better than your way." Some people may take a different approach by saying, "Because I can't understand Your ways and my way seems so much more logical and reasonable to me, I seek to go my way."

Whatever we go through in life, we must acknowledge that He has been through it countless times with countless others. As He was with them, He will be there with us. All He asks of any of us is to trust Him and walk obediently with Him.

Too many of us walk like spoiled children before a holy and righteous Father, insisting on getting our own way. We pretend to think we know what is better and what fits us more than God does. But He knows us much better than we know ourselves. He understands us and our individual needs so much better than we do.

God gave us the greatest gift one could ever hope to receive in a lifetime when He gave Jesus to be our Savior. Why not give God the one thing that He desires most. We have gone our way and done our own thing long enough. Where has it gotten you?

Acknowledge to Him your pridefulness. Say to yourself, "I need Christ in my life. I need His forgiveness. I have made a mess of my life and for once I am going to do what is right."

If you will confess your need and desire for Him in your life, He promised to come into your heart. He promised to forgive you of all your sins and give you peace within.

We can't do anything about our past but we can do something about the future. Do it today.

Until next week — God bless.

"A GIFT FOR THE GIVER"

During this time of year there is a great deal of focus on purchasing, giving and hopefully receiving the proper gift. You might even be one of those in a "shopping frenzy" this weekend. Recently while reading the book of Philippians I came across a wonderful lesson that all of us need to apply through the whole year. "Really, it is not that I want to get gifts from you. But I want you to have the good that comes from giving" (Philippians 4:17-ERV). Paul was so thankful for all that the church had done in support of his work but he also knew that they had been blessed by giving. In Acts 20:35, Luke recorded the words of Jesus as it relates to this theme by stating the words of Christ. "It is more blessed to give than receive" was truly the life's story of our Lord. The word "blessed" means to be happy or fortunate. The Greek word translated "blessed" is found 50 times in the New Testament. Four of the times it appears it is translated in the KJV as "happy" (John 13:17; I Corinthians 7:40; I Peter 3:14; I Peter 4:14).

Many seem to reason that receiving is what makes them happy rather than accepting the fact that giving provides the true joy. God gave his Son, Jesus gave his life. Giving is what God does! Let's embrace the spirit of sharing as best we can every day of the year.

Ridding world of wickedness will help prevent future violence

By Terry Mattingly
Scripps Howard News Service

Blame it on the guns.

No, blame the judges who banned God talk in schools, along with most lessons about right and wrong.

No, our lousy national mental-health care system caused this hellish bloodbath.

No, the problem is the decay of American families, with workaholic parents chained to their desks while their children grow up in suburban cocoons with too much time on their hands.

No, it's Hollywood's fault. How can children tell the difference between fantasy and reality when they've been baptized in violent movies, television and single-shooter videogames?

Why not blame God?

These were the questions in 1999 when two teen gunmen at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo., killed 13 people and themselves in the massacre that set the standard for soul-searching media frenzies in postmodern America.

After Columbine, Denver's archbishop wrote an agonizing reflection that looked toward a future after all the headlines and endless cable-news coverage. This past week, the staff of Archbishop Charles Chaput, now leader of the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, circulated those words once again. What has changed?

"The media are already filled with 'sound bites' of shock and disbelief; psychologists, sociologists, grief counselors and law enforcement officers — all with their theories and plans," he wrote.

"God bless them for it. We certainly need help. Violence is now pervasive in society — in our homes, our schools, on our streets, in our cars as we drive home from work, in the news media, in the rhythms and lyrics of our music, in films and video games. It is so prevalent that we have become largely unconscious of it.

"The causes of this violence are many and complicated: racism, fear, selfishness. But in another, deeper sense, the cause is very simple: We're losing God, and in losing him, we're losing ourselves. The complete contempt for human life shown by the young killers ... is not an accident or an anomaly or a freak flaw in our social fabric.

"It's what we create when we live a contradiction. We can't systematically kill the unborn, the infirm and the condemned prisoners among us; we can't glorify brutality in our entertainment; we can't market avarice and greed ... and then hope that somehow our children will help build a culture of life."

Columbine unfolded in the Easter season, noted Chaput, a time in which believers are reminded that even the Son of God was not spared the reality of death.

"The Son of God descended into hell and so have we all, over the past few days," noted the archbishop. "But that isn't the end of the story."

Now, the Newtown massacre has shattered the season of Advent, in the days preceding the 12-day season of Christmas — another biblical event that included violence and the deaths of innocents, as well as the singing of angels and signs of ultimate hope.

Little has changed.

Death is real and life is precious. Innocence is fragile and sin is terrifyingly real. The violence that haunts our culture is real and at times impossible to prevent.

WHAT DOES THE BIBLE SAY: By Gary Puryear

"THE WONDERS OF TECHNOLOGY"

If only they could come back and see the changes! Maybe you've said that about a loved one or a friend who passed away before the burst of technology that has come on the scene in my life time. While these have provided some ease for certain tasks it has equally provided frustration to those of us who did not grow up with all the present day gadgets. Who can keep up? As soon as you buy that new phone or computer another more advanced is either waiting in the wings or is debuted the next day. Change is the name of the game of life but is all change profitable? My full-time preaching has spanned over 4 decades and I have seen many changes taking place in our society. We should not be surprised at the direction much of our nation has taken in regards to morals. When God is removed then you dismiss respect for authority. If there is no God then why respect life? If there is no afterlife and no one to whom I must answer for my actions then does it matter what I do? Too many are attempting to correct a crumbling house by putting on a new coat of paint, moving a wall, or installing some new gadget when the root of the problem is the foundation. All kinds of evil are committed beginning in the heart (Matthew 12:34-35). The blame for evil rests in the crumbling foundation of those moral principles that guide and keep a society intact. Technology rapidly changes but God's will for man today never changes (Galatians 1:6-9). Let's put the blame for evil where it belongs-Satan and his evil devices. If we want effective change in America it must begin with a return to godly values.

Teach children real meaning of Christmas before it arrives

Dear Dr. Graham: Can you give me some advice on how to keep our children from getting so focused on their presents on Christmas morning that we end up forgetting the true meaning of Christmas? We face this problem every year.

— Mrs. L.W.

Dear Mrs. L.W.: I suspect most families with young children have this problem; I know we did!

And after all, don't we want our children to be excited about Christmas, even if it isn't always for the right reasons? As time passes, they'll grow in their understanding.

One way to deal with this is to help your children understand the meaning of Christmas before it actually arrives.

Christmas is only a few days away now, but why not take a few minutes daily until then to read to your children about the birth of Jesus? (You'll find it in the Bible in Matthew, chapters 1 and 3, and in Luke, chapter 2.)

Tell them that one reason we give gifts at Christmas is because on that first Christmas, God gave us the greatest gift of all — the gift of His Son, our Savior.

Then let me encourage you as a family to give gifts to people who are less fortunate than you. Let your children have a part in this; they might, for example, pick out a toy for a local toy drive or give some of their allowance to an organization that helps poor children in other parts of the world.

It will help them become concerned about others and not just themselves. The Bible says, "Share with God's people who are in need" (Romans 12:13).

Finally, ask God to help you make the meaning of Christmas a reality in your own lives. Children learn from our example as well as our words; do they see Christ in you?

Court upholds penis removal decision

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE – A Kentucky man lost his bid Friday to force a doctor to pay damages for removing a cancer-riddled section of his penis during what was scheduled to be a simple circumcision.

The Kentucky Court of Appeals found that a jury correctly concluded that 66-year-old Phillip Seaton of Waddy consented to allow Dr. John Patterson to perform any procedure deemed necessary during the Oct. 19, 2007, surgery.

Patterson, a Kentucky-based urologist, maintains he found cancer in the man's penis during surgery and that it had to be removed. The patient claims the surgery was supposed to be a circumcision and he never authorized the amputation, nor was he given a chance to seek a second opinion.

"Additionally, there is uncontroverted testimony in the record that if Mr. Seaton were not treated for the penile cancer, it would prove fatal in the future," Judge Janet Stumbo wrote for the court.

Judge Michael Caperton dissented, but did not issue a written opinion.

Clay Robinson, a Lexington-based attorney for Patterson, said the opinion was "very well-reasoned" and fact-based.

"You always appreciate when you see judges at any level go into that amount of detail," Robinson said.

Seaton and his wife, Deborah, sued Patterson, a Kentucky-based urologist, in Shelby County Circuit Court in 2008. Seaton, now in his 60s, was having the procedure to better treat inflammation. The Seatons also sued Jewish Hospital, where the surgery took place. The hospital settled with the couple for an undisclosed amount.

Both sides agree that Seaton had squamous cell carcinoma, a type of skin cancer, in his penis. Patterson concluded that a tumor had overtaken much of the top of the organ, which made it impossible to insert a catheter.

"He also opined that serious complications and additional surgery could result if he did not insert the catheter," Stumbo wrote.

Complete specifications will be on file at the office of the Tri-County Recycling Center, 398 Sam Ball Way, Henderson, KY. A site visit to the proposed location prior to bidding is mandatory for the bid proposal to be accepted. Interested parties should call (270) 827-1979 or (270) 724-4321 to schedule an appointment to pick up specifications and details for this project.

The bid award will be made on the basis of lowest and/or best bid. Tri-County Recycling Alliance reserves the right to accept or reject any and/or all bids if, in its judgment, the best interest of the Alliance will be served.

Conflicts of interest, gratuities and kickbacks as defined in KRS44A.455 are absolutely prohibited. The provisions of these statutes shall be noted and acknowledged by the users of this procurement document.

All bids are to be made in accordance with these provisions and shall be submitted in multiples of seven (7) copies.

This equipment is being re-advertised due to a discrepancy in the bid specifications and any prior-submitted conforming bid need not be resubmitted.

Donald Hugh McCormick
Chairman
Tri-County Recycling Alliance

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
HOSPITAL FACILITIES
REFUNDING REVENUE BONDS

Notice is hereby given that a public hearing will be held on behalf of the County of Henderson, Kentucky (the "Issuer") by the County Judge/Executive of the Issuer on Tuesday, January 8, 2013 at 9:25 a.m. at the Henderson County Courthouse, 20 North Main Street, Henderson, Kentucky 42420, to discuss the issuance by the Issuer of not to exceed $7,200,000 (Seven Million Two Hundred Thousand Dollars) in principal amount of Hospital Facilities Revenue Bonds, Series 2013A (Community United Methodist Hospital, Inc. Project) (the "Bonds") pursuant to Chapter 103.200 – 103.285 of the Kentucky Revised Statutes, as amended (the "Act"). The proceeds of the Bonds would be used (i) to refinance the outstanding principal amount of $5,000,000 of a taxable promissory note, dated June 29, 2012 (the "Taxable Note"), from Community United Methodist Hospital, Inc. (the "Hospital") payable to Fifth Third Bank, the proceeds of which were used to finance the acquisition, construction, equipping and installation of an air handling system (the "Prior Project"); (ii) to acquire, equip and install certain medical equipment and other health care and health related facilities (the "New Project" and together with the Prior Project, the "Project"); and (iii) to pay certain issuance costs associated with the Bonds. The Project is owned and operated by the Hospital and located at 1305 North Elm Street, Henderson, Kentucky 42420; 1413 North Elm Street, Suite 204, Henderson, Kentucky, 42420; 411 Letcher Street, Henderson, Kentucky, 42420; and 471 Klutey Park Plaza Drive, Henderson, Kentucky 42420.
THE BONDS SHALL NOT REPRESENT OR CONSTITUTE A DEBT OR PLEDGE OF THE FAITH AND CREDIT OR THE TAXING POWER OF THE ISSUER. Interested persons are invited to attend this public hearing and will be given an opportunity to express their views concerning the proposed issuance of the Bonds. Persons wishing to submit written comments should send them to the fol-

Today in history

Associated Press

Today is Saturday, Dec. 22, the 357th day of 2012. There are nine days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 22, 1912, Lady Bird Johnson, the wife of President Lyndon B. Johnson, was born Claudia Alta Taylor in Karnack, Texas.

On this date:

In 1864, during the Civil War, Union Gen. William T. Sherman said in a message to President Abraham Lincoln: "I beg to present you as a Christmas-gift the city of Savannah."

In 1910, a fire lasting more than 26 hours broke out at the Chicago Union Stock Yards; 21 firefighters were killed in the collapse of a burning building.

In 1944, during the World War II Battle of the Bulge, U.S. Brig. Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe rejected a German demand for surrender, writing "Nuts!" in his official reply.

In 1992, a Libyan Boeing 727 jetliner crashed after a midair collision with a MiG fighter, killing all 157 aboard the jetliner, and both crew members of the fighter jet.

Ten years ago: Time magazine chose as its Persons of the Year for 2002 three female whistleblowers: FBI agent Coleen Rowley; WorldCom auditor Cynthia Cooper; and former Enron vice president Sherron Watkins.

One year ago: Melanie Amaro, a 19-year-old vocalist from Sunrise, Fla., won the first U.S. season of "The X Factor" talent competition on Fox.

Think about it

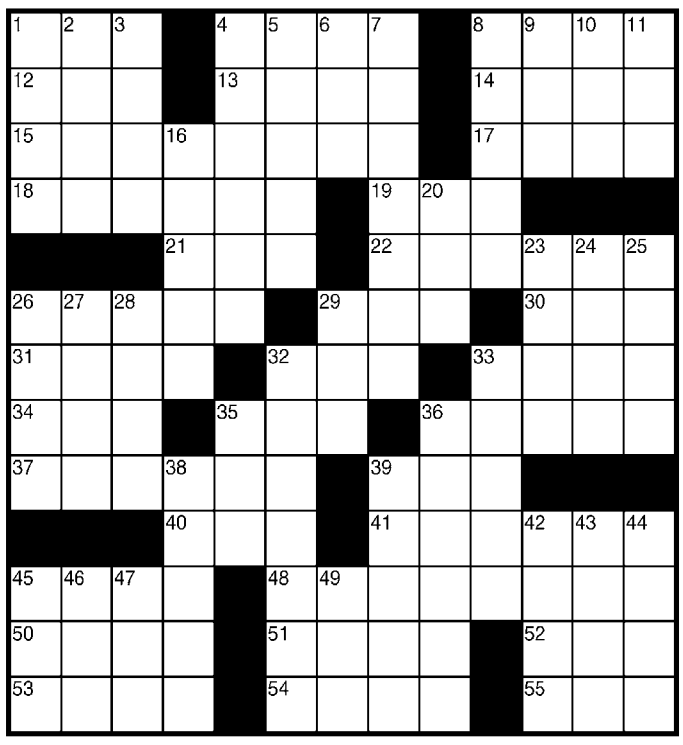

"The way you overcome shyness is to become so wrapped up in something that you forget to be afraid."
— Lady Bird Johnson (1912-2007).

6 p.m. on (T)
Movie: The Wizard of Oz

The memories! The colors! Toto, too! Almost every child knows the story of Dorothy and her faithful dog blown by a twister to the magical land of Oz. Judy Garland stars as a more mature version of Dorothy in this 1939 classic adaptation of L. Frank Baum's book. She and Toto follow the yellow brick road, making friends with an unlikely trio along the way. Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Margaret Hamilton and Frank Morgan co-star.

7 p.m. on 14
Movie: Mr. Magoo's Christmas Carol

Mr. Magoo is the near-sighted star of this hourlong, animated 1962 adaptation of the Dickens holiday classic, which boasts a Broadway-caliber score by "Funny Girl" team Jule Styne and Bob Merrill. Songs include "Ringle Ringle," "Winter Was Warm," "I'm All Alone in the World" and "(We'll Have) The Lord's Bright Blessing." Voice talent includes Jim Backus, Jack Cassidy, Royal Dano, Morey Amsterdam and Jane Kean.

7 p.m. on 44.2
Cops

The latest version of the show's popular annual special, "Ho! Ho! Ho! No. 10," follows officers in Portland, Ore.; Las Vegas; and California's Alameda County. When officers discover a man and woman engaging in lewd activity, a meth pipe also turns up. Elsewhere, police conduct a prostitution sting at a hotel.

7 p.m. on (H)
Movie: Joyful Noise

A Georgia town puts importance on a local church choir emerging victorious from a competition in writer-director Todd Graff's pleasant, tuneful 2012 comedy that gives Dolly Parton and Queen Latifah chances to show off both their musical and comedic talents. Latifah plays the group's leader, who wants to stay conservative, while Parton is cast as a relative spitfire who wants to shake things up. Keke Palmer ("Akeelah and the Bee") also appears.

7:30 p.m. on 25
A Chipmunk Christmas

Ross Bagdasarian Jr. — son of the well-known creator of the title characters — lends his voice to David Seville, Alvin and Simon in this animated holiday special, first seen in 1981, that finds Alvin and the Chipmunks (also including Theodore) being asked to perform at Carnegie Hall on Christmas. Among the songs are "The Chipmunk Song," "Chipmunk Jingle Bells" and "It's Beginning to Look a Lot Like Christmas."

7:30 p.m. on (E)
NFL Football

NFC playoff positioning could be at stake for the Atlanta Falcons tonight at Ford Field when they visit the Detroit Lions. The Falcons have dominated the NFC this season and could be playing to wrap up the conference's No. 1 playoff seed and home-field advantage throughout the postseason. They'll do it against a Lions team that is closer to last place than first and will likely be headed home in January.

8 p.m. on (AP)
The Year in Pup Culture

Cuteness is the order of the evening with this special that looks back at the defining moments of 2012 — re-enacted by puppies. From headline news to film scenes that amuse, they're all getting "puppified" in what Animal Planet insists will be the cutest hour on television.

9 p.m. on 19
Law & Order

Police Detectives Briscoe and Curtis (Jerry Orbach, Benjamin Bratt) hear echoes of the Holocaust while investigating a murder in "Survivor." When a rare-coin dealer is found dead, the detectives look for coins missing from his safe. The answer to this whodunit lies in the coins' history: They were stolen from a private collection by the Nazis and disappeared after the war.

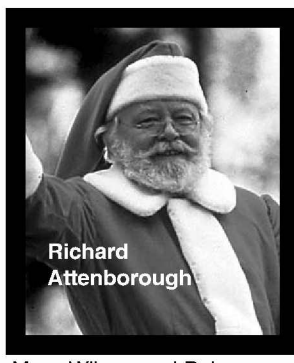

9 p.m. on (f)
Movie: Alvin and the Chipmunks: The Squeakquel

Now in the care of Dave Seville's (Jason Lee) nephew Toby (Zachary Levi, "Chuck"), chipmunks Alvin, Simon and Theodore (voices of Justin Long, Matthew Gray Gubler and Jesse McCartney) enter a battle of the bands contest to save their school's music program in this 2009 sequel to the 2007 box-office hit "Alvin and the Chipmunks." Like the original, this follow-up includes a blend of live action and CGI footage.

9:30 p.m. on (A)
Movie: Miracle on 34th Street

A cynical single mother hires a department store Santa who insists he's not just another subordinate Claus, but the genuine article. She and her equally skeptical daughter don't believe it for a minute, but we know that won't last. Elizabeth Perkins,

Mara Wilson and Dylan McDermott star in this 1994 remake of the Christmas classic, with Richard Attenborough ("Jurassic Park") as jolly old you-know-who.

9:30 p.m. on (TL)
Everybody Loves Raymond

Robert (Brad Garrett) seeks outside help for a family problem in "The Cult." Upset by the near-constant arguing between Debra and Marie (Patricia Heaton, Doris Roberts), Robert joins a support group that promotes inner peace. Fearing it's actually a cult in disguise, the women and Frank (Peter Boyle) get Ray (Ray Romano) to attend a meeting and see what's really going on.
